

Nation thrown into mourning by sudden death of Lyndon Johnson

BY GARTH JONES
Associated Press Writer

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (AP) — The body of former President Lyndon Baines Johnson will be flown to Washington to lie in state in the Capitol rotunda and receive the nation's final tribute.

Johnson, whose dreams of a Great Society were dampened by divisions at home over a war in Asia, died Monday of a heart attack at 64.

Johnson's coffin will be carried on a horse-drawn caisson in a procession to Capitol Hill Wednesday afternoon. A ceremony will be held in the rotunda.

Funeral services will be held Thursday in Washington's National City Christian Church, after which the body will be returned to Texas for burial in the family cemetery of the LBJ Ranch.

Before the body of the nation's 36th president is flown to Washington, it will lie in state from noon CST today until 8 a.m. Wednesday at the LBJ Library in Austin, Tex. There will be a full honor guard.

Johnson was pronounced dead at 5:43 p.m. EST Monday aboard his private plane at San Antonio International Airport.

During the early morning hours, an honor guard moved in and surrounded the Austin funeral home to which the body was taken. The men stood six feet apart at parade rest, their rifles without bayonets. They wore caps instead of helmets. The unit was from Ft. Sam Houston, San Antonio, and Ft. Hood in Central Texas.

The sudden attack ended a distinguished public career which saw Johnson rise from simple Texas roots to both houses of Congress, to the powerful post of Senate Democratic leader which earned him the reputation as a masterful politician, to the vice presidency and finally to the presidency after the assassination of John F. Kennedy in 1963.

As the first Southerner to hold the presidency since Andrew Johnson, his accomplishments in the domestic fields of civil rights, Social Security, education and housing were highly praised. He was credited with pushing through social programs Democrats had been trying to enact since the New Deal days of Franklin D. Roosevelt.

When Johnson inherited the presidency, he inherited the war in Indochina. Following his election as chief executive in 1964 by a landslide margin, he greatly expanded the U.S. involvement in Indochina and opposition to the war mounted at home. The war eventually was a major factor in his dramatic announcement in March of 1968 that he would not seek re-election.

On Monday, 51 minutes before he was pronounced dead, Secret Service agents responding to his pleas found Johnson slumped on the bedroom floor of his ranch in Johnson City and began a desperate 85-mile trip by air to Brooke Army Medical Center here in hopes of saving his life.

Col. L.R. Hieger, chief of pathology at Brooke, performed an autopsy on

'Final' peace talks end

PARIS (AP) — Henry A. Kissinger conferred with Hanoi's Le Duc Tho for 3 hours and 45 minutes today and then flew back to Washington, ending a negotiating session that the White House said was to complete a Vietnam peace agreement.

Kissinger and Tho emerged from their secret meeting and posed shaking hands in front of the International Conference Center on Avenue Kleber in sight of the Arc de Triomphe.

But they gave no indication whether the cease-fire agreement was now complete or whether further decisions were required from President Nixon or President Nguyen Van Thieu of South Vietnam.

It was noted, however, that official U.S. and North Vietnamese photographers were admitted to part of the session.

Kissinger flew into Paris late Monday night. By the time he drove to Orly Airport to take off for Washington today he had spent little more than 16 hours in the French capital — much shorter than his previous negotiating visits.

He told newsmen waiting as he moved to his plane that he had no statement to make.

Nor was there any immediate comment from the other parties to the negotiations.

Neither South Vietnam nor the Viet Cong took part in the meeting.

Tho smiled and waved to newsmen as he arrived at the International Conference Center in the heart of Paris, site of the long-deadlocked, four-party peace talks. Kissinger arrived four minutes later and smiled briefly as he entered the building.

It was Kissinger's and Tho's first meeting there, their previous negotiations having been held in suburban villas with each acting as host alternately. Some observers concluded that the move was another indication that agreement was near.

There was no official word on whether a date has been set for signature of the agreement. Outgoing Secretary of Defense Melvin Laird hinted to newsmen in Washington Monday night that the text may be initialed Wednesday.

Kissinger returned to Paris Monday night and went into immediate conference with Foreign Minister Tran Van Lam of South Vietnam. They met again today before Kissinger's session with Tho.

Lyndon Baines Johnson

LBJ hailed by Nixon, colleagues

WASHINGTON (AP) — Led by President Nixon, the nation paid tribute today to Lyndon B. Johnson as the president whose domestic achievements were overshadowed until his death by the war he couldn't end.

"No man had greater dreams for America than Lyndon Johnson," said Nixon of his predecessor in the White House. "Even as we mourn his death, we are grateful for his life, which did so much to make those dreams into realities."

Johnson's deeds matched his dreams of civil-rights and social progress, said others in appraising the five-year administration of the president whose death stunned the capital Monday night.

In a refrain echoing through the appraisals by many of Johnson's associates, Sen. Edward M. Kennedy said: "As President, his brilliant leadership on the Civil Rights Act of 1964 and the Voting Rights Act of 1965 have earned him a place in the history of civil rights alongside Abraham Lincoln.

"And his efforts to help the poor, the sick and the oppressed stand out as landmarks of America's concern for those too weak to help themselves."

Thrust into office by tragedy, Johnson coped first with the mounting racial turmoil of the mid-1960s, but watched the nation become more deeply rent as American soldiers died by the thousands in Vietnam.

Former Sen. Eugene McCarthy, who coalesced antiwar forces behind his surprisingly strong challenge to Johnson's expected bid for renomination by the Democratic party in 1968, said of the dead president:

"If he was to be faulted, it was not for lack of dedication or lack of commitment, but for taking upon himself too much of the burden and the responsibilities of government."

On March 31, 1968, Johnson shocked the nation with the announcement that he would neither seek nor accept renomination.

Johnson's vice president, Hubert H. Humphrey, reflected on that day:

"He and Lady Bird, Lucy and her husband came up to our apartment. He said 'Could I talk to you alone?' Then he told me what he was going to do. He said 'I've done everything I could to try and end the war. I've tried the Pope. I've tried the Russians. I've tried the Pope the French. I'm going to make another supreme effort. Hubert, I want peace in Vietnam more than anything."

But Humphrey recalled that Johnson believed he could not bring the warring parties into peace negotiations unless he withdrew from the campaign and purged the bid of any political taint.

"I really have a feeling," Humphrey said in a late-night interview in his Senate office, "that as we bury President Johnson that peace will come alive." He referred to the reportedly imminent signing of a peace agreement negotiated by Nixon's adviser, Henry Kissinger, and the North Vietnamese.

Sen. Barry Goldwater, roundly defeated by Johnson in 1964, said: "The country has lost a great political leader, a dedicated American, and I have lost a friend, the memory of whose friendship I will forever cherish."

Nixon broadcast

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon will address the nation by television and radio at 9 p.m. CST today presumably to announce the initialing of the Vietnam peace agreement. In making the announcement, press secretary Ronald L. Ziegler said only that Nixon would report on the status of negotiations. The obvious importance of the presidential address was underscored by a Ziegler announcement that Nixon will meet with the entire Cabinet at 7 p.m. and the five top Democratic and Republican leaders of Congress at 8 p.m.

Inflation rates equal for '71, '72

WASHINGTON (AP) — Higher prices for eggs, fresh vegetables and household services pushed up the cost of living by 0.3 per cent last month, giving the nation a 3.4 per cent rate of inflation in 1972, the same as 1971.

The Labor Department's Bureau of Labor Statistics reported today the consumer price index went up to 127.3 per cent of the 1967 average, meaning that it cost consumers $12.73 to buy the same basket of goods that $10 bought in 1967.

But the December increase was figured at only 0.2 per cent when the department subtracted the usual seasonal influences from the statistics.

On a seasonally adjusted basis, food prices showed no change over November. But they went up by a sharp 0.5 per cent on an unadjusted basis.

The BLS issued an indirect warning that the January index will show sharply higher food prices. Wholesale prices of food went up sharply in December, but not all of the impact was reflected in the December Consumer Price Index.

The BLS said price information for two indexes is collected at different time of the month, adding that there is generally a time lag between wholesale price increases and their reflection at the retail level. In addition, it said, not all wholesale price increases are passed on to the consumer.

The report showed the Nixon administration went over its 1973 target of trying to cut the rate of inflation to three per cent or below at the end of the year. During Phase 1 and Phase 2 economic controls, which were abandoned by President Nixon early in January, consumer prices went up 3.2 per cent, the report said.

The report said that prices of food purchased at grocery stores climbed by a sharp 0.6 per cent, but this is a usual increase for December, the BLS said.

Food prices at restaurants went up by 0.3 per cent, the report said.

Non-food commodities rose by 0.1 per cent on an unadjusted basis and 0.2 per cent on a seasonally adjusted basis. The main reason for the rise was new car price increases put into effect in early December on an order approved by the Price Commission.

The price of services went up by 0.4 per cent in December, the report said.

In Phase 3, the Nixon administration has retained wage-price controls in the food, construction and health industries. Most of the rest of the economy was freed from direct mandatory controls. The administration said it will challenge any price increase out of line with voluntary standards.

In another report, the department said average weekly earnings of workers went up by 2.7 per cent last year. The increase for December was 0.1 per cent.

Average gross weekly earnings rose 7 per cent last year to $135.78. The average in 1971 was $126.91.

The oath of office

State remembers LBJ as informal campaigner

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Wisconsin, which Lyndon B. Johnson's two sons-in-law once called home, remembered the late president today as a politician who campaigned with pleasant informality.

During a 1963 visit when he was vice president, Johnson leaped from a motorcade and trotted to the porch of a South Side home to shake hands with an astonished man and his wife.

The memories include a 1964 visit during which Johnson popped into William Balsmider's grocery store, pointed to a ring of bologna in a meat case and said: "Just cut me off a little hunk. I want to save it and eat it later when nobody else is around."

He borrowed cash from a Secret Service agent to pay for the sausage and some candy, remarking: "I had peppermint stick candy and bologna sausage as a boy. That's what I was raised on."

That was Johnson's last visit to Milwaukee. He paid a 1972 visit to Hudson for a testimonial dinner in honor of a University of Texas football star from that northwestern Wisconsin town.

Irving Luntz, an art gallery president, recalled a visit during which Johnson purchased two paintings.

Luntz quoted Johnson as saying he "liked to pick up a piece of local color in every state I visit."

"He is very determined to get what he wants," Luntz said. "If he dislikes a piece of art, he will tell you. If he likes one, he will very definitely tell you so. He doesn't pull any punches."

Charles Robb, formerly of Milwaukee, married one of the Johnson daughters, Lynda Bird.

Her sister, Lucy, married Patrick Nugent, a former student at Marquette University in Milwaukee.

Johnson was 64 when he died Monday.

"I just talked to him on the phone when I was in Dallas" a week ago, Milwaukee industrialist William Feldstein told the Milwaukee Sentinel.

Feldstein, a Democratic fund raiser and a friend of the Johnson family, related: "The President always was afraid he would die before he was 65. He would tell us: 'All the men in my family died before 65.'"

George Reedy, Johnson's White House secretary and now Marquette University's dean of journalism, said he was too upset by the death to comment immediately about a man he had served for 17 years.

"I haven't seen him in quite some time, and it really comes as quite a shock to me," Reedy said.

Democratic Gov. Patrick J. Lucey described Johnson as, "in many ways, the most American of our leaders."

"He believed in the infinite capacity of the American people to improve and perfect themselves, as individuals and as a society," he said.

Wisconsin shared in the setting of one of the most dramatic episodes of the Johnson career.

A Minnesota senator, Eugene J. McCarthy, was campaigning against Johnson's policies during Wisconsin's 1968 presidential primary when, while making a speech in Waukesha, he was told Johnson was withdrawing from the race.

McCarthy's antiwar platform and a growing disenchantment with the Vietnam conflict contributed to Johnson's decision.

"As President," Lucey said, "Lyndon Johnson was often said to be larger than life. In death, we think of him as a tragic figure: a man of so many great hopes and dreams for America, who was wounded by the war in Vietnam as badly as any soldier."

Low temperature doesn't cause colds

People who work in cold-to-freezing temperatures or are exposed to them during their work do not catch more colds than the average person, a survey of florists and butchers and fruit and produce men discloses.

Cold temperature does not cause colds, the author of a recent book on the common cold concluded.

While florists are not exposed to extreme changes in temperatures, they are subjected to possible chilling. Flowers are kept in a refrigerator room at a temperature ranging between 40 degrees and 45 degrees.

Many of the women who work in florist shops said that as a precaution they wear sweaters or knit dresses the year around. The men, however, wear their regular clothes. Florists appear either to catch no colds or to average three or four a year.

Fruit and produce men, too, are subject to possible chilling. There are two kinds of coolers—one for citrus fruit, apples and potatoes with the temperature set at 53 degrees, the other for celery, lettuce and other greens set at 48 degrees.

One produce manager said that the men in his department spend an average of an hour a day in the coolers. His record of colds had been one in three years of his men, two or three a year. They wear regular clothing but put on a light coat or windbreaker when they go into the coolers.

Butchers cut and trim meat in a room where the temperature is approximately 45 degrees to 50 degrees. The temperature in the freezer room for meat ranges from 20 degrees to 40 degrees below zero. Many butchers said that the varying temperatures had no effect upon them and that they didn't catch colds any more often than people they knew in other fields.

All colds are usually treated alike. Inhalation, application of heat and home remedies are used extensively. Aspirin are of help. Gentle warm gargling relieves a sore throat; a teaspoonful of table salt added to a pint of warm, not hot water makes a good gargling fluid.

Fluid intake is thought to produce a desirable effect, but no special diet seems to be useful to those suffering from a common cold.

A Right-On wig

A completely new kind of hairpiece you blend or twist into many different designs, is now being introduced by Brentwood, makers of synthetic wigs and hairpieces.

The hairpiece, which is available in Appleton, is 12 inches in length and is made of Kanekalon. This natural looking modacrylic fiber is invisibly secured to a flexible band, so that it can be twisted or wrapped into a myriad of instant hairdos.

The hairpiece is attached to hair with bobby pins. Fluff it with fingers for a curly effect, or it can be brushed quickly into smoother shapes.

A soft final touch to slicked-back hairdos, it can also dress up loosely set hair, or it can make soft wigs look longer.

Bent into a circular shape, the Right On becomes a chic chignon at the nape of the neck, or a flattering wiglet pinned on the crown. Bent into a 'U' shape, it becomes a sweeping cascade of curls that can be placed anywhere on the head. Wrapped taut around very long hair, it is an elegant barrette. Two tightly twisted pieces can be worn as puffs over the ears, or they can be spread out to encircle the head.

Ideal for travel as well as for quick hairstyle changes anytime, the wig is light, and easy to pack. Kanekalon fiber drip-dries and needs no resetting. It doesn't fade in sunlight, and it can't wilt in humidity like natural hair.

The hairpiece comes in all the natural shades, including blondes, browns, blacks, reds, greys and frosted.

Brushed elegance

At left, the model's own shoulder-length hair was brushed straight back and caught at the crown in a pony tail. The hairpiece was bent in a half-moon shape and pinned across the crown to behind the ears. At right, the hairpiece is pinned along the neckline over brushed straight hair.

More area women lead double lives

In Outagamie County, more married women than ever before are leading double lives—as home makers and as job holders. Such is the case also, in Calumet, Waupaca and Winnebago Counties.

In stores, factories, business offices, the professional fields and elsewhere, women at work is the order of the day.

Managing the double life takes a bit of doing. Making it possible is the array of labor-saving devices and equipment that has cut down the time needed for household chores.

In addition, there is the great variety of prepared and semi-prepared foods that enable women to turn out a meal in job time.

Latest figures indicate that no less than 35.6 per cent of the married women in Outagamie County are now employed outside the home or are looking for such employment. In 1960 the ratio was 24.6 per cent.

Nationally, there are nearly 19 million married women who go to work each day. Some of them have full-time jobs and some parttime. They outnumber their single sisters by about 50 per cent.

The facts and figures are from the Department of Commerce, the Labor Department and others.

They show that married women have drastically altered the job market in the past decade. They accounted for 43 per cent of the total number of new job opportunities and about 75 per cent of the female employment gains.

Much of the increase has been due to middle-age women, who have more time on their hands, now that their children are growing up.

However, the major advance in the past five years has been among younger married women: those in the 20 to 24 age bracket working to supplement their husbands' incomes. There are 40 per cent more of them at work now than there were in 1966, says the Department of Labor.

Figures for Outagamie County show a rising proportion of women—married and unmarried—holding down jobs.

The 1960 census listed a total of 10,519 in the labor force, equal to 30.9 per cent of the local female population of working age.

According to the latest census, it has now reached 40.7 per cent, with a working force of 16,102.

Similar changes have been noted in the other sections of the local area. The figures are as follows.

Working Wives

Ann Landers

Better to plan separate life

Dear Ann Landers: This is an urgent cry for help. Throw me a rope — even if it's just one single sentence.

Our only daughter ran off and married a fellow we never cared for. I accepted her decision when I saw we had no choice. They now have a beautiful little 8-month-old baby girl and my daughter seems happy.

The problem is my husband. He wants nothing to do with her or the grandchild. They visit me in the afternoon when he isn't home.

Yesterday when my husband walked into the house and found them here he mumbled, "Hello," and walked to the back of the house. You would have thought he was a repairman who had come to fix something. My daughter was heartbroken. I could see the hurt in her eyes. Neither of us said anything but we were thinking the same thoughts.

Is there anything I can do, Ann? My husband has always been stubborn as a mule. For example, he hasn't spoken to my brother for 14 years because he bought a furnace without consulting him. Last month he ran off an insurance man because he was driving a Volkswagen and they aren't union made.

We have no sex life. I clean the house and cook the meals and he pays the bills. We have no communication, no social life. I've thought of leaving but where could I go? I don't drive. I have only a high school education. How would I support our two sons?

Counseling is out. He is "satisfied with things as they are."

Please answer soon. I hope I'm around to read it. — Depressed Woman (I was going to sign "Depressed Wife," but that word doesn't fit.)

Dear Woman: You don't say how old you are but I suspect you are too young to dry up and blow away. Seek counseling for yourself if the mule won't go. You might decide later to get some job training and make a new life for yourself. Your husband must support his sons no matter what you decide to do. So please get going, dear, and good luck to you.

Dear Ann Landers: I am a girl 16 and this guy I always thought was so super is 17. I have been wanting him to notice me for a year, and he finally did. Our first date was Friday night. He invited me to go to a three-hour documentary at a drive-in. I would have preferred a coffee date so we could talk and get acquainted but he was determined to see the movie.

After about an hour of what I thought was a very fascinating film, he turned to me and said, "I'm bored. I'll bet you're a neat kisser. Show me."

I told him to forget it — that I was enjoying the movie. A few minutes later he grabbed me. I let him have it right in the mush. Unfortunately, I broke his glasses. I said I was sorry but it was his own fault.

He got very nasty and yelled about sending me the bill for new glasses and if I refused to pay it he would send the bill to my father. Do I have a responsibility to pay for his glasses? Yes or no? — Shattered in Sheboygan

Dear Shat: No. And I doubt very much that he would send the bill to your father, considering the circumstances. The moral of this story is that a guy who makes passes should take off his glasses.

Audubon Society honors work of Mrs. Williams

Mrs. Lloyd Williams, Appleton, was made an honorary member Sunday of the Northeastern Wisconsin Audubon Society in recognition of her accomplishments in the field of environmental education.

Mrs. Williams launched a nature awareness program for fourth and fifth graders in 1971 on land donated by Oscar J. Boldt near Appleton.

According to Tyrus Baumann, president of the society who presented the honorary membership in Green Bay, Mrs. Williams' project is "reported to be the most outstanding nature center for environmental teaching of elementary school children in Wisconsin."

The center, located at U.S. 45 and 10 northwest of Appleton, operates for approximately four weeks each spring and fall. Outagamie County school children spend a full day at the center, studying nature as it is present in four separate stations: Soil, pond, animal and plant.

Mrs. Williams' objective—and that of the 45 trained housewives who volunteer their time as trail guides—is to instill in the youngsters a lasting respect for nature.

Baumann said, "We believe your accomplishments in furnishing outstanding leadership in this project will set an example for dedicated people in other communities."

'Stump the housebreaker'

Everytime we leave the house anymore, I play a game called, "Stump the Housebreaker."

"I just know someone is going to back up a truck and take all of our possessions," I told my husband.

"That means the loss could go as high as $37.52," he yawned.

"What do you mean by a crack like that?" I asked.

"It means this is the stuff we gave to Goodwill and they sent it back with a turkey and a box of canned goods."

"Well, a crook doesn't know that I don't have a vault full of precious jewels."

"When he sees a house with an Edsel in the driveway with four flat tires and a McGovern bumper sticker, he knows he hasn't exactly picked a winner."

"You laugh. The other night I wanted an interview with a man on television who was serving time for housebreaking and he had a lot of neat tips for homeowners."

"Which include?"

"First, he said to leave your bathroom light on."

"With three teen-agers, our bathroom light hasn't been off in 12 years. Come to think of it neither have the lights been off in the bedrooms, hallway, living room, basement, attic, garage, kitchen or refrigerator."

"Then he said you should definitely have a vicious dog."

"The last time our dog moved was when I stepped on his tail with my golf shoes."

"We got that big stuffed dog from the fair we could wind up to look real."

"Don't you think a robber would get suspicious when the dog smiled and did a backflip every 15 seconds?"

"The trouble with you is you don't take this very serious."

"I do take it serious. It's just that I put myself in the place of a housebreaker and I cannot see myself breaking the law for an old TV set that makes Orson Welles look like a thermometer and a jewel box that contains three baby teeth and a 40-words-a-minute typing pin."

"You are trying to tell me in your subtle way that no one wants what we have."

"Let me put it another way," he explained. "Do you remember when there was a peeping Tom in the neighborhood and you undressed for bed one night without pulling the shades and we haven't seen him since?"

"You made your point," I said stiffly.

"Let's go, kids, and don't forget to leave the doors unlocked!"

Dr. G. C. Thosteson

Blood donor must be healthy, at least 18

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I am 14 and wish very much to donate blood at the local Red Cross.

My parents say no, I'm too young. If this is true, why? I am in excellent health.

If I wish to donate, why not? What are the qualifications of a blood donor and why?—L.A.

heart problem called angina pectoris, to be used when attacks of pain come. The booklet you want is "How to Handle Angina Pectoris." It can be obtained by mail. Send 25 cents and a long self-addressed stamped envelope to me in care of The Post-Crescent.

Your parents are right. And even if they didn't say no, the blood bank would.

The principal qualifications for giving blood are that you must be between 18 and 65. These limits were set by the Red Cross and the American Association of Blood Banks.

Why 18? Because until then you will still be growing and maturing, and in the growing and developing years, you need all the blood that nature provides for your own use.

Blood is very much needed, but the first responsibility in getting it is to make sure the donor is not harmed in any way.

There are other requirements, and the list is as long as your arm—the arm they'll take the blood from when you're old enough.

But I don't think there's any purpose in trying to give the whole list now. Primarily they want to be sure you are healthy and do not have, or have not had, any diseases that could impair the quality of the blood or transmit diseases (hepatitis and syphilis are two examples) to the recipient of the blood.

They don't want to take blood from you if you have a cold at the time or if you show any indication of anemia. And they don't want you to give blood without allowing a sufficient time for your body to replace what you have given.

If you're healthy and 18, you needn't worry much about these other requirements. You can take care of that when the time comes.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: You had an article on the use of nitroglycerin tablets but I misplaced it and do not have the name of the booklet about it. What booklet would it be?—Mrs. C.R.

Certainly, such irregularity is quite common in the teens.

Of all the problems pediatricians encounter in children, pinworm is the commonest. To learn the newest methods of treatment, write for the booklet, "The Commonest Pest, Pinworm," enclosing a long, self-addressed (use zip code), stamped envelope and 25 cents in coin to cover printing and handling.

Dr. Thosteson welcomes all reader mail, but regrets that, due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters. Readers' questions are incorporated in his column whenever possible.

Cheerleading squads compete

GREEN BAY — Cheerleading squads from Appleton area junior and senior high schools have been invited to participate in the third annual University of Wisconsin-Green Bay State Cheerleading Contest. The event will take place Saturday, Feb. 10, in the UWGB Deckner Building.

Registrations for the competition will be accepted through Feb. 2 by Linda Mudd, coordinator of the event. More information on the contest is available on request from Miss Mudd, in care of the University of Wisconsin-Green Bay, Green Bay, Wis. 54302.

Competitors from throughout the state will come prepared with one performance cheer, and all squads will be judged according to National Cheerleading Association standards. Champions will be named from three divisions: varsity cheerleaders from schools with more than 500 students; varsity cheerleaders from schools with fewer than 500 students, and a third category for junior varsity, wrestling and freshman squads.

A total of 33 schools from all parts of Wisconsin were represented at the 1972 contest. All public and private junior and senior high schools in the state are eligible to compete.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I am 14 and wish very much to donate blood at the local Red Cross.

My parents say no, I'm too young. If this is true, why? I am in excellent health.

If I wish to donate, why not? What are the qualifications of a blood donor and why?—L.A.

Your parents are right. And even if they didn't say no, the blood bank would.

The principal qualifications for giving blood are that you must be between 18 and 65. These limits were set by the Red Cross and the American Association of Blood Banks.

Why 18? Because until then you will still be growing and maturing, and in the growing and developing years, you need all the blood that nature provides for your own use.

Blood is very much needed, but the first responsibility in getting it is to make sure the donor is not harmed in any way.

There are other requirements, and the list is as long as your arm—the arm they'll take the blood from when you're old enough.

But I don't think there's any purpose in trying to give the whole list now. Primarily they want to be sure you are healthy and do not have, or have not had, any diseases that could impair the quality of the blood or transmit diseases (hepatitis and syphilis are two examples) to the recipient of the blood.

If you're healthy and 18, you needn't worry much about these other requirements. You can take care of that when the time comes.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: You had an article on the use of nitroglycerin tablets but I misplaced it and do not have the name of the booklet about it. What booklet would it be?—Mrs. C.R.

The tablets are used for a type of heart problem called angina pectoris, to be used when attacks of pain come. The booklet you want is "How to Handle Angina Pectoris." It can be obtained by mail. Send 25 cents and a long self-addressed stamped envelope to me in care of The Post-Crescent.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: With reference to your article dealing with alcohol, I believe if you were to ask any bartender what the contents of a "Presbyterian" are, he would tell you equal portions of ginger ale, club soda and a jigger of rye. We have been ordering them for years and that is what we are consistently served. —L.H.H.

Any bartender? No, because I've used this dodge when I wanted a nonalcoholic drink without calling attention to it.

But from your letter and others, I see the need for warning that a "Presbyterian" differs in different localities. For a safer—and more recent—dodge, some places now call a Bloody Mary without vodka a "Bloody Shame."

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Could it happen that a young girl seemingly in good health would skip menstrual periods after having had them for a few months on a fairly regular cycle, for reasons other than pregnancy?—R.E.N.

Certainly, such irregularity is quite common in the teens.

Of all the problems pediatricians encounter in children, pinworm is the commonest. To learn the newest methods of treatment, write for the booklet, "The Commonest Pest, Pinworm," enclosing a long, self-addressed (use zip code), stamped envelope and 25 cents in coin to cover printing and handling.

Dr. Thosteson welcomes all reader mail, but regrets that, due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters. Readers' questions are incorporated in his column whenever possible. Copyright 1973

Pros, cons on abortion ruling

'A step forward'

BY SANDRA SHACKELFORD
Post-Crescent Staff Writer

Monday's landmark Supreme Court decision allowing medical abortion during the first six months of pregnancy was met with hurrahs from abortion advocates today.

Peterann Joel, a member of the Wisconsin committee to Legalize Abortion and an Appleton resident, called the move a "marvelous step forward."

"The've recognized the rights of the woman and the family, the rights of a child to be born into a home where it will be loved," she said. "I think it's interesting that in their formal writeup the original intent of our anti-abortion laws was to protect the health and safety of women. Abortion now is safe or safer than childbirth and from that standpoint the original reason for abortion laws is no longer with us."

Joel continued that she found it interesting that "they point out that this returns us to the same position of the Common Law before the anti-abortion laws were passed. In the 1800s before the anti-abortion laws were passed, abortion was legal by Common Law until the time of quickening."

During the year 1972 the Appleton-based Wisconsin Committee to Legalize Abortion has counseled approximately 350 women who were considering abortion.

"I expect it will take a little while before clinics are set up and rolling but I'm hopeful that it won't be too long," she said.

Gene Boyer, national vice president of National Organization of Women (NOW) and a member of the Governor's Commission on the Status of Women, was adamant on her position and the position of NOW.

Rogers stunned

BY BILL KNUTSON

William Rogers sipped his coffee and shook his head in disbelief. He had seen a sliver of hope when, two months ago, voters in North Dakota and Michigan soundly defeated moves to liberalize abortion laws in those states.

The people let it be known what they thought about abortion, Rogers recalled. The voters in Michigan and North Dakota had blunted the pro-abortion drive. Rogers was sure of that.

It was the minority groups — the women's liberationists, the zero populationists, the environmentalists — who held the pen that wrote Monday's historic United States Supreme Court decision removing most legal barriers to abortion in every state. Of that, Rogers was just as sure.

The Supreme Court justices chose to listen to the shouts of the minority instead of the calmer voice of the majority, Rogers insisted. Supreme Court justices are human, he lamented. They bend in the strong winds of public opinion.

The decision so bothered Rogers that he wasn't sure late Monday that he even wanted to stay in the race for state superintendent of public instruction. He was genuinely stunned. His initiative, at least for the time being, was bled dry.

The veteran Kaukauna assemblyman worked hard, in Madison and back home, to smother the fires sparked by those who want freer abortion laws.

Rogers is a Roman Catholic and he has eight children. But he insists that is not why he became the abortion opposition leader in Madison. It's not why he joined forces with two Combined Locks housewives who have organized a Fox Cities right to life force. It's not why, two Continued on Page 3

Teachers get new contract in Appleton

BY ARLEN BOARDMAN
Post-Crescent Staff Writer

The Appleton Board of Education Monday night put the final stamp of approval on the teachers' calendar 1973 master contract. Administrators estimated the impact of contract increases at $400,000.

A tentative contract was agreed on by negotiators in late December, and the Appleton Education Association (AEA) ratified it early this month.

In other action Monday night, the board:

✓ Approved seeking federal funds for a pilot program to begin reducing the number of high school dropouts. The program would include identifying potential dropouts, probably beginning at the junior high level, and setting up special programs to, among other things, make school more attractive.

✓ Approved a 1973-74 school year calendar calling for classes to start Sept. 4 after the Labor Day weekend and end June 12, 1974. The board dropped the pre-Labor Day start idea as opposition mounted.

Dr. Kenneth Johnston, director of administrative services, said the new teacher pact, effective last Jan. 1, included about $300,000 for salary hikes (including the annual increment built into all master contracts to reward teachers for each additional year of experience), $75,000 for payment of teacher retirement premiums and over $14,000 for unit leaders' increases. The latter are in special elementary unitized teaching programs and spend extra time coordinating and planning.

The school's total cost for increases in salaries, including principals, teachers and secretaries, was $588,676 bringing that categorical cost from $9.45 million in 1972 to about $10.04 million for 1973. The total 1973 budget is about $11.7 million.

The increases in teachers salaries is about a 4.54 per cent increase, or about $400,000, Johnston said, noting this includes the increment.

The new pact calls for a $100 increase in the teachers' base salary to $7,700 and increment percentage hikes. The effect is to strengthen the salary levels of the middle experience teachers in a salary schedule covering teachers with no experience to about 13 or 14 years.

Included in the new teacher pact was a letter of understanding to formulate joint eight-member committee to pick up certain unresolved negotiations items touching on teacher involvement in decision making on curriculum and other classroom-related topics. Four members will be picked by the board and administration and four by the AEA.

In introducing the dropout program request, James Westphal, director of academic services, said the dropout problem has been looked at for years, and administrators thought it was time to act. Under a program that could last three years or more, the potential dropout would be identified, provided basic skills through a special program and influenced by an emphasis on his successes in school.

Administrators said the program wouldn't alleviate the home problem where the dropout usually gets his unstable condition, but it hopefully will make school interesting and desirable enough to keep him going.

Westphal said a review of student folders revealed that 649 youngsters had dropped out in the last five years — representing 4.2 per cent to 5 per cent of total enrollment.

Some board members expressed concern the program didn't get into the critical area of what causes dropouts, although the home was named as the most thought-of cause.

The program, which would start with a special teacher training workshop next summer, would be aimed at creating a "home base" for the special group of youngsters. One teacher would teach more than one subject and more field trips would be taken.

Also, career and remedial programs would be set up, and classes would be emphasized. The program may not be aimed at ninth graders but administrators said between eighth and ninth

Sales set K-C record

NEENAH — Kimberly-Clark Corp. sales and earnings set records in 1972, according to a preliminary report released to stockholders today.

The unaudited figures show net income for 1972 was $55.7 million or $2.39 per share, up 76 per cent from $31.7 million or $1.35 per share before extraordinary items in 1971. A previous earnings record was $49.9 million or $2.31 per share reported in 1969.

Sales in 1972 were slightly more than $1 billion, up approximately 8 per cent from $938 million in 1971.

Darwin E. Smith, chairman and chief executive officer, said operations in 1972 were characterized by "a strong improvement in earnings in all major areas of our business."

"This reflected not only the improved economic conditions of 1972, both within and outside the United States," he said, "But also a continued realization of important gains from profit improvement programs. The earnings improvement objectives set forth in our 1971 plan to dispose of four mills was more than met during 1972."

Smith reported that the most significant improvements in 1972 were in U.S. paper and forest products operations, but also contributing to the record earnings were strong performances from U.S. consumer and service products and from operations outside the United States. He said the company by year's end had introduced new Kimbies disposable diapers to approximately 60 per cent of the U.S. market and that it expects to continue rapid expansion of distribution in 1973.

Smith said the indicated results for the fourth quarter were favorably influenced by several year-end adjustments which contributed approximately six cents to net income per share. Principal adjustments included a reduction in pension accruals to more actively reflect current conditions and a reduction in income taxes which had been provided for early in 1972.

Hyphenation plea backed

The State of Wisconsin has rebutted petitions filed by North Central Airlines and Oshkosh-Winnebago County which ask for a review by the Civil Aeronautics Board (CAB) of its trial judge's decision to separate the Appleton and Oshkosh air markets.

In a brief filed by George Schwahn, assistant attorney general, the state rejects claims of North Central, Oshkosh and Green Bay that the judge's findings were in error and asks the CAB to deny the petitions for review.

The hearing judge, Joseph Fitzmaurice, ruled on Dec. 12, after an eight-day hearing in August, that North Central's route designation of "Oshkosh-Appleton" should be changed to just "Oshkosh."

North Central, Oshkosh and Green Bay all have claimed the hearing judge made errors in his findings of fact and that there also were prejudicial procedural errors.

In its brief, the state supports Appleton's contention of confusion and misdirection of passengers and freight because of the present hyphenated designation. At the same time, citing passenger boardings at Appleton, the state said "commuter carriers came into being and continue to exist because North Central's service has not served the needs of these passengers."

The CAB has not yet ruled whether it will accept the petitions for a review of the hearing judge's ruling.

Primary is probable in Kaukauna's 3rd Ward

KAUKAUNA — A primary election appears likely in the 3rd Ward as a third candidate, Frank Potter, 501 Main Ave., as taken out nomination papers.

Already filing papers were Floyd endleton and Edwin Schuette. City ordinance requires a primary whenever two or more candidates seek the same office.

Cleanup brigade

Young people and directors of the Appleton Youth Drop-In Center are getting ready for the big move to the old vocational school on Jan. 27. The new quarters at the school, considerably larger than the present arrangement at the Labor Temple, are expected to be occupied and operational by Feb. 1, according to Leo Patt, center board vice president. He said the sections of the old school which had housed printing, electronics and welding operations, will be taken over by the center. Above, Charlotte Arnold wipes dirt from ceiling tiles while John Zuleterger, below, takes care of the grime on the floor. (Post-Crescent photos)

A whole litter of potential stars

A star was born four weeks ago in Neenah. Actually 10 potential stars were born and one or more of them will launch brief careers in show business during the Guthrie Theater's presentation of "Of Mice and Men" in Neenah and Appleton this week.

Mrs. Milton Enright, 1107 Cold Spring Road, Neenah, responded to Guthrie Theater's plea for a puppy to play an important role in "Of Mice and Men," which opens Wednesday at the Neil Armstrong High School Auditorium in Neenah under the sponsorship of Lawrence University.

Mrs. Enright is the owner of a mixed German Shepherd-beagle which gave birth four weeks ago to 10 puppies. The proud papa, as near as can be determined, is a collie that lives in the area.

Before each performance of "Of Mice and Men," Guthrie talent scouts will audition the pups for the show, and will return the one chosen immediately afterward. There will be five performances, including matinees Wednesday and Thursday before area high school students in the Armstrong Auditorium. Two performances in Lawrence's Stansbury Theater Friday and Saturday are sold out but tickets are still available for the Wednesday evening performance in Neenah.

Mrs. Enright said she was glad to make her puppies available for "Of Mice and Men." She added that anyone who would like to provide a home for any of the nonpedigreed but illustrious actors at the conclusion of their show business careers is invited to contact her at home in Neenah.

Referendum to decide Kimberly athletic field

KIMBERLY — On a 4-2 vote Monday night, the board of education decided to put the question of building a $150,000 athletic field to a referendum on April 3.

Board members agreed that the referendum should be binding, but they left open the method of financing the field. If the voters approve the field, a special school district meeting will be conducted to decide whether the $150,000 should be raised with a bond issue, or borrowed from the state trust fund.

Supt. Ray Hamann said that the special meeting could be scheduled for April 16, if the referendum passes.

In an informal poll earlier this month, the board split on the question of how much money to request from the taxpayers. Three members favored a $150,000 field, and three felt that spending should be held to under $100,000. On Monday night, Joseph Van Daalwyk ended the deadlock, saying he had given the proposal a lot of thought, and had changed his mind in favor of the $150,000 request.

Harold Wentzel said he did not think the people would vote for $150,000, and he again suggested that spending be limited to $82,500, for site preparation and an all-weather track. Mrs. Charlotte Helf, said she would also prefer to "stay in the vicinity of $100,000," and board president Mrs. Marie Ruys agreed, but felt that the question still should be put to a referendum.

Maurice Biersteker argued that if the school district was going to finance the field through borrowing, then it should stick to the higher amount. Frank Gossens then moved "that we go for a referendum vote for $150,000." Van Daalwyk, William J. Kluge, Biersteker and Gossens voted for the motion, and Wentzel and Mrs. Helf opposed it.

The proposed fields would be constructed on school district property south of the high school. Included in preliminary plans are an all-weather track, baseball diamond, site preparation and watering system, and a parking lot that also could be used for physical education classes and as a range for drivers' education.

The cost of these estimated $144,000, but the actual cost will not be known until bids are submitted.

The $150,000 would be a ceiling on spending for the project.

In other action, the board authorized the administration to start registering students for a power mechanics course next year. If enough students sign up, administrators will go ahead with planning a classroom in the high school basement, and equipment purchases. Supplies and equipment for power mechanics would cost about $20,000, Hamann said. Plans for the classroom must be submitted to the state Industrial Commission.

Jerry Kain, assistant high school principal, said that 157 students had expressed interest in the course, in an initial enrollment study.

The board also approved the right to read program at the Gerrits Junior High School and career education planning.

Board members gave administrators permission to seek funds for these programs.

Violinists charm board into program extension

Music filled the Appleton Board of Education room at the Morgan Administration Building Monday night and when it was all over, the board, charmed by the mini-musicians with big talents, approved expanding the unique violin-teaching program at the elementary level.

The musicians were 10 youngsters, aged five to seven and mainly in Primary 2, who are taking lessons from Miss Janes Schlegelmilch at Highlands Elementary School.

The pupils learn to play by the Suzuki method. It contrasts the traditional note-learning method by allowing the youngsters to learn the music as they learn to speak—from hearing and imitating. Note reading comes later.

The results: The youngsters play with the capability normally expected from junior high students, and at least one girl, with the capability of a high school student.

Miss Schlegelmilch and Austin Boncher, public school music coordinator, told board members they would like to expand the program, which was started two years ago as a pilot. Miss Schlegelmilch had been trained in the Suzuki method.

The board approved the expansion to other schools with present staff. It may not be expanded to all primary schools, depending on interest and other factors.

The 10 youngsters filed into the board of education room just before the meeting started, and after a short wait, began to perform. Led by their teacher, they played songs and performed musical games and exercises that are aimed at building their musical talents.

Miss Schlegelmilch said the class is started by bringing mothers in with the youngsters and having the parent play the violin, only to the extent that they can help stimulate the child's interest in playing. Nothing parents aren't pressed to play extensively, she said, they hopefully will be able to at least understand good sound and violin position.

She said the parents "set the atmosphere" for playing and practicing. The method was started by Shinichi Suzuki, a Japanese teacher, who thinks William Recker, 21, 1020 W. Harris St., was injured in an early-morning scuffle Sunday, not Robert Recker, of the same address, as was reported in a Police & fire beat item published Monday in The Post-Crescent on page B-14. The name was incorrectly listed in a city police department account of the incident, which also showed that the scuffle occurred at 401 S. Walnut St., not at the Reckers' Harris Street home as was stated in the news story.

William Recker was treated at St. Elizabeth Hospital for minor injuries suffered in the scuffle and was released.

State begins bridge work in Kaukauna

KAUKAUNA — State highway department crews have begun exploratory work on the Lawe Street Bridge, part of the State 55 route through the city, in an effort to determine the amount of work necessary to put the span in good condition.

The crews are expected to take test borings and to check the underside of decking for about a week before beginning actual repair work. The lift span portion of the bridge has been jamming for the past few years and much of the work will be concentrated there. Piers on the structure also are to be checked thoroughly.

Highway department engineers estimated the bridge will be closed for at least two weeks for any reinforcing work needed and another two weeks for concrete curing after filling holes in the decking. Steel plates may be used to cover concrete while it cures to reduce the time the bridge is closed, according to City Engineer Robert Natrop.

Highway 55 traffic will be rerouted down County Trunk CE to County Trunk N and across the community bridge connecting Little Chute, Kimberly and Combined Locks while the Lawe Street Bridge is closed.

Local traffic will have to be funneled across the Wisconsin Avenue Bridge. Tentative date set for the first bridge closing is Jan. 29.

Plans call for removing the old blacktop and deteriorated concrete on the bridge later this year when weather permits. The work will be handled in stages to permit partial traffic on the bridge rather than a complete shut-down.

St. Elizabeth Hospital sets prenatal classes

Prenatal exercise classes at St. Elizabeth Hospital will begin at 7 p.m. Feb. 7 and 8 in the hospital staff room.

The cost is $5 per person for a series of four classes.

Husbands are invited to the first and fourth classes, which will concern labor and delivery.

Persons may preregister by calling the hospital.

Neenah must reinstate worker

NEENAH — A Wisconsin Employment Relations Commission arbitrator has, for the second time, ordered that the city reinstate an employee fired two years ago for moving out of the city.

John T. Coughlin, in a decision dated Thursday, told the city that the street and sanitation worker, a member of Teamsters Local 563, must be hired back with full pay from Dec. 31, 1970, when he was discharged.

The first decision, released on Dec. 9, 1971, made the same award. However, through a chain of appeals and resulting decisions, it came back to Coughlin.

Clearing the tracks

Crews from the Soo Line Railroad start the troublesome task of repairing the tracks and removing the damaged cars following Sunday night's derailment along Harrison Street just south of Neenah. Some 22 cars of the 75-car freight headed for Chicago derailed. Harrison, from Byrd to U.S. 41, will be closed for the next three days to allow crews to clear the area.

In his decision, Coughlin cited the city's argument that the employee had violated the city ordinance. The ordinance, he said, was a work rule, not a part of the collective bargaining agreement.

"The employer did not present even one scintilla of evidence to show that the grievant's ability to perform his job was in anyway affected by his not living in the City of Neenah," Coughlin said.

"Therefore, the arbitrator finds that the ordinance requiring the grievant to live within the city is not reasonably related to the job performed by the grievant. It then necessarily follows that just cause cannot flow from the enforcement of an unreasonable work rule," he wrote.

The union had brushed over the argument that the city ordinance was unconstitutional and also that it should be a matter for arbitration.

Although Coughlin did not address either argument directly, because he said "the arbitrator does not deem it necessary to decide that question," he said the item was "arbitrable."

And, in a footnote, he cited case law which points out "the right of every citizen to live where he chooses and to travel freely not only within the state but across its borders is a fundamental right which is guaranteed by both our and the Federal Constitutions."

Restaurant gets initial OK for new parking lot

Mayor James Sutherland cast a tie breaking vote to give plans commission approval Monday to a Wisconsin Avenue supper club's request for permission to build a parking lot on land zoned for residential use.

The commission endorsed the special-use permit for Chef Bill's Supper Club, 1405 E. Wisconsin Ave., on a 3-2 vote. The parking lot is planned on a lot at the rear of the property located at 1206 N. Plateau St., behind the supper club.

Owners of neighboring residential property had appeared before the commission earlier this month to oppose the permit. They were supported by their City Council representative, Ald. Judith Winzenz (12th), who submitted a letter that was given to commissioners Monday outlining the objections.

Planning Director Jack Hetu also opposed the permit.

They argued it threatens neighboring residential property and raises the prospect of similar requests from other Wisconsin Avenue businesses. The residential areas should be preserved, they said.

Commissioner Lloyd Doerfler said he doubted the residential neighbors' fears are well-founded. An attorney for the supper club owner, William Dougherty, denied that there are plans to expand the parking lot in the future through a second special-use permit application, as predicted by Hetu and neighbors.

The attorney also claimed the chief objection of the nearest neighbor was that his lot and the parking lot are lower than others surrounding them, creating standing-water problems at certain times of the year. The attorney said Dougherty has offered to give the neighbor earth to fill his lot when the parking lot is graded, but the agreement is not complete.

The attorney was joined by Ald. Roylance Pointer (14th), City Council commerce and industrial development chairman, in pointing out that the city has a tradition of encouraging businesses to provide off-street parking.

Pointer added that unless businesses are allowed to expand they fail.

Sutherland joined Commissioners Ralph Gertsch and Doerfler in supporting the request.

NM Council to answer buyers

NEENAH-MENASHA — A new approach to consumer-merchant complaints, one that already has the blessings of Gov. Patrick J. Lucey and Atty. Gen. Robert Warren, has been unveiled by the Neenah-Menasha Chamber of Commerce.

It calls for the formation of a Buyer's Action Council, representing the interests of both consumer and merchant, to settle complaints. The council, with rights to subpoena witnesses and issue binding decisions, would replace the "usually slow, ineffective and expensive process for handling consumer complaints."

Lucey said the proposal, which was drawn up by a Chamber-appointed consumer affairs task force and released Monday, "is quite interesting and appears to be a step forward in the area of consumer protection."

Warren called it "very innovative," and said it "should certainly have a positive impact on your ability to solve consumer problems at the community level."

About 30 merchants and others were at the introductory session Monday, when the program was explained and questions asked. Now, the chamber will begin signing merchant members to the BAC in hopes of having it ready for action within a month.

Briefly, this is what it will do:

—Only members of BAC can take part in the settlement process. To belong to BAC, first year dues of $45 must be paid. In subsequent years, Chamber administrative assistant Paul Green expects that fee to decline. He anticipates $25 for 1974.

—Merchant members would have forms in their establishments which, if efforts at in-store reconciliation between merchant and consumer failed, could be filled out "for speedy processing and appointment of a hearing date," according to the task force report.

—A pre-hearing conference would be arranged. Then, both parties appoint an adjuster (originally called arbitrator, but some merchants have indicated they do not like the sound of that word). These two adjusters then select a third adjuster, and the hearing could begin.

The third adjuster most likely will be a lawyer. The chamber is now making up a list of prospective adjusters, and attorneys are being sought chiefly because it is felt that they could help with their legal expertise.

—With both parties signing an agreement to arbitrate, the council would acquire the power, under state statute, to settle the case with legal authority. Appeals could be made to Small Claims Court or elsewhere only if there is a miscarriage of justice, fraud, corruption or something similar involved.

—Arguments are presented at the hearing by both consumer and merchant. Documents can be presented and witnesses subpoenaed. If witnesses fail to appear ($5 witness fees will be paid), the council can petition Winnebago County court to compel attendance or risk a contempt of court citation.

The new procedure will be an improvement over the present chamber of commerce consumer claim service, which now involves the filling out of a form at chamber offices which is sent to the merchant.

"We just kind of hope for a response," said Green. It's been surprisingly effective, he said, with more than 50 per cent of all complaints being settled.

"The purpose of the Buyer's Action Council is to avoid the court congestion delay in getting cases to trial (in Small Claims Court), delay in going down to Oshkosh to pre-trial conferences, initial return dates on summons and complaint, and finally to try the case in Oshkosh," reads the task force report presented to merchants and chamber members.

Johnson's body late Monday night and listed the official cause of death as coronary thrombosis.

Hiegar's autopsy showed that the former president had severe coronary artery disease, with complete occlusion — closure — of two of three major arteries to the heart. A third artery was about 60 per cent occluded.

Complete results of the autopsy await further evaluation, said Dr. George McGranahan, Johnson's cardiologist.

The former President had a history of heart trouble dating to 1955. He suffered what was termed as a major heart attack in April 1972 and was hospitalized with chest pains last July.

With him at death were three Secret Service agents, Dr. David J. Abbott of Johnson City, the plane's pilot and the wife of the foreman of the sprawling LBJ ranch, to which he retired after leaving the White House.

As Johnson was flown to San Antonio, his wife, Lady Bird, was contacted by radio telephone in a car about a block from the LBJ Library, about 80 miles from the family ranch. She immediately went by helicopter to San Antonio, arriving at Brooke hospital before her husband's body.

A family spokesman said Mrs. Johnson had prepared breakfast for the former president before going to Austin on business. The spokesman quoted her as saying, "His health seemed no different than it had been recently. He seemed a bit quieter but was in good spirits."

After spending more than an hour in San Antonio, Mrs. Johnson returned to Austin and joined her daughter, Luci, and son-in-law, Patrick J. Nugent, for the return to the family ranch to discuss funeral arrangements.

The Johnson's other daughter, Lynda, and her husband, Charles S. Robb, made plans to fly to Texas from Charlottesville, Va., where Robb is a third-year law student at the University of Virginia. A plane was provided by President Nixon.

Johnson's death came 28 days after that of former President Harry S. Truman, leaving the nation without a living former chief executive. Nixon ordered flags on all federal buildings, already lowered to mark Truman's death, flown at half staff for 30 days following Johnson's death.

Johnson's death stunned associates and his farmer and rancher neighbors in Stonewall, the home of the 300-acre LBJ ranch.

Johnson made his last official public appearance last Thursday at Austin for the inauguration of Democratic Gov. Dolph Briscoe. He mingled with the crowds, shaking hands and chatting with well wishers. Last Saturday night Johnson went to Stonewall Cafe to pay some men who had done some landscape work for him.

Recalling the visit, Kermit Hahne, the cafe owner, said, "He seemed more normal than I have ever seen him.... He did not seem to be ailing at all. He seemed to be in good health, good spirits."

At a news conference in Austin several hours after Johnson's death, Tom Johnson, a former business associate and news secretary not related to the family, gave this account of the seizure:

At 4:50 p.m. EST, Johnson, who routinely took a nap after lunch, called the ranch switchboard and asked that a Secret Service agent be sent to his bedroom. Agents Ed Nowland and Harry Harris dashed 100 yards from their quarters with a portable resuscitator. They arrived in about two minutes and began to treat the former president. The third agent, Mike Howard, arrived within minutes and the trio attempted mouth-to-mouth resuscitation and external heart massage.

"They found Johnson lying on his back, on the floor next to his bed," Tom Johnson said. "They said it appeared he was dead."

Unable to revive Johnson, the agents summoned Abbott and with Mrs. Dave Malachuk and pilot Barney Hewitt, they set out for San Antonio in the Johnson plane.

Abbott pronounced Johnson dead after the aircraft landed at San Antonio. The finding was confirmed aboard the plane by McGranahan, who took over as Johnson's personal physician last July.

It was aboard a plane in Dallas on Nov. 22, 1963 that Vice President Johnson was sworn in as 36th President of the United States after Kennedy was gunned down during a motorcade through city streets. Johnson, who was riding in the motorcade behind Kennedy, was not injured.

Five days after the assassination of Kennedy, which cast a pall of despair across the nation, Johnson went before a joint session of Congress and in a speech interrupted 30 times by applause, the Democrat from Texas declared:

"An assassin's bullet has thrust upon me the awesome burden of the presidency. I am here today to say that I need your help. I cannot bear this burden alone. I need the help of all Americans and all America."

He went on to ask congressional action on civil rights and social legislation left in the seed stage by Kennedy's death.

The presidency culminated the career of the onetime school teacher who was born in a three-room home near Stonewall on Aug. 27, 1908, the eldest of five children of Rebekah Baines and Samuel Ealy Johnson. The oil boom had not yet come to Texas and the Johnson family was extremely poor.

FTC going after those little cigars

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Trade Commission recommended to Congress today that the term "cigarette" be redefined under the law pertaining to advertising and labeling to include "small cigars."

If enacted, the change would ban advertising for small cigars from radio and television, the same way that cigarette advertising is now banned.

The FTC also recommended that the health warning now required on cigarette packages and in cigarette advertising include mention of diseases associated with smoking.

The commission also suggested that the Public Health Cigarette Smoking Act be amended to require a declaration of the tar and nicotine content of each cigarette to appear on all packages and advertising.

The FTC recommended increased appropriations for the Department of Health, Education and Welfare to purchase time and space in the media for messages designed to discourage cigarette smoking.

Finally, the commission recommended the appropriation of funds for National Institutes for Health research to develop a cigarette not hazardous to health.

Death report in Onassis crash false

ATHENS, Greece (AP) — Alexandros Onassis, the only son of the Greek shipping magnate, struggled for life today after being critically injured in an airplane crash.

The Ministry of Press and Information issued an announcement on his condition after reports from sources in the hospital said that he had died. The ministry said it made the announcement on the basis of information from Paraskevas Ionnides, director of Olympic Airways, the Greek national airline owned by Aristotle Onassis.

The announcement came about one hour after Aristotle Onassis and his wife Jacqueline were seen leaving the hospital, heads bowed and tears streaming down their faces.

A source close to the Onassis family said Alexandros was in desperate condition with a severe concussion and brain damage he suffered when his private plane crash-landed at Athens Airport Monday.

Alexandros' mother is now Mrs. Stavros Niarchos, whose husband also is a shipping millionaire.

A hospital attendant said she "was apparently crying by Alexandros' bed all night."

Doctors said they had done everything possible for Alexandros, and that his survival depended on his youth and physical resistance. He is 24.

Another visitor at the bedside was Fiona von Thyssen, divorced wife of Baron Heinrich von Thyssen, who was Alexandros' constant companion until his father reportedly put a stop to the association a year ago. Recently they have been appearing together again.

Onassis was piloting the plane when it crashed shortly after taking off from the Athens airport. Airport officials reported the amphibious craft developed mechanical trouble.

Two copilots, Donald MacGregor, a Briton, and Donald MacCusker, an American, were seriously injured. But the doctors reported them out of danger today and improving.

No official word yet on plane crash toll

LAGOS, Nigeria (AP) — There was still no official word early today on the death toll in what may be the worst airline crash in history.

Airport officials at Kano, in northern Nigeria, said they feared 180 persons died in the crash Monday of a chartered Jordanian jetliner as it was landing during a period of limited visibility. The passengers were Nigerian Moslems returning from a pilgrimage to Mecca.

Officials of Nigeria Airways in Lagos said there were 202 persons aboard "Boeing 707, but Radio Nigeria's Kano correspondent reported a total of 209, with 29 survivors.

Royal Jordanian Airways, which made the flight for the Nigerian airline, said the runway collapsed when the big plane touched down, and the wreckage burst into flames.

The Jordanian line said it had been informed that the American pilot of the plane, Capt. John Waterman, and the six other members of his crew were among the survivors although they were burned.

The worst previous air disaster occurred last Oct. 13 near Moscow, when 176 persons were killed in the crash of a Soviet jetliner.

It was believed in Lagos that the harmattan — the dry, cold dust storm that blows south from the Sahara — was probably the cause of the low visibility that played a part in Monday's crash.

The harmattan occurs in Nigeria from December through February and is most severe in the northern states bordering the desert. When the dust storms blow up, flights to Kano, Nigeria's second largest city, usually are routed on to Lagos, 730 miles to the south, but on Monday the weather was bad in Lagos.

5,000 taken from danger of volcano

REYKJAVIK, Iceland (AP) — An armada of fishing boats and planes evacuated 5,000 Icelanders early today from a small island off the southeast coast after a volcano on the island erupted for the first time in history.

By dawn the lava had reached the outskirts of Vestmannaeyjar, the only town on the island of Heymaey. But by then only 300 of the 5,300 islanders remained to be taken off.

The sea around Heymaey was lit up like a busy street by the lights of the hundreds of fishing boats the government rushed to the island 75 miles southeast of Reykjavik.

Ashore the lava had not reached the houses of Vestmannaeyjar yet, but several were ablaze from the heat of the flow.

The islanders drove their livestock and pets to the harbor and the airstrip in hopes of getting them away. There were no casualties reported and no panic.

One islander, Jon Stefansson, said he was getting up to go fishing at 2 a.m. when he heard "terrible noises."

"Then I heard a siren from the fire station and thought there must be a fire somewhere in town," he continued. "The volcano just didn't enter my mind. But when I looked out of the window, it was plain what had happened."

Women, children and hospital patients were flown out despite a rain of hot ash falling on the airstrip. The other residents left by boat. Officials for a time feared the harbor at Vestmannaeyjar might be closed by the oozing lava, but this danger did not materialize.

Vestmannaeyjar is only 150 yards from Helgafell, the volcano that had not erupted since the Vikings discovered Iceland in 864 A.D. But the first outpouring of lava flowed away from the town and into the Atlantic, and it was some time before the flow moved toward the houses.

Ships of Iceland's large fishing fleet and its five coastal patrol boats were sent to the island. All buses in Reykjavik were commandeered and dispatched to Thorlakshofn, on the southern coast where the rescue armada was to land the evacuees.

The eruption was preceded by a small earthquake Monday. Then during the night a fissure 2,000 to 3,000 yards long split open and began spewing out lava and ash.

Volcanoes are comparatively common on Iceland, where most of the Kentucky-size main island is formed from lava.

Scientists believe half of the total output of lava on the earth in the past 500 years is located in Iceland. Since the country was settled over 1,000 years ago, there have been about 30 active volcanoes. In the past several hundred years, eruptions have occurred every five or six years.

When Laki erupted in 1783, it spewed out enough lava to cover a country the size of Switzerland to a depth of one foot. Smoke from that volcano was seen over Europe and later in Asia.

years ago, he introduced a bill that would require death certificates for aborted fetuses.

Two other Fox Valley lawmakers expressed disappointment in the Supreme Court decision.

U.S. Rep. Harold V. Froehlich, R-Appleton, said, "I am disappointed to learn that the U.S. Supreme Court yesterday nullified many state laws regulating abortions. It is my feeling that this is a question that should be resolved at the state level."

"In Wisconsin, I have opposed the relaxation of our abortion statutes as decreed by the federal courts. I continue in that opposition and feel that action by the Congress itself may be necessary to clarify the issue. The federal court, again, is legislating, and this is wrong."

State Sen. Gerald Lorge, R-Bear Creek, termed the decision a travesty and said it "will come to haunt the United States of America. The decision yesterday was a dark day in this nation. It eventually will cost us a tremendous population decline and we will become an old society."

Lorge said he would introduce a resolution urging Congress to call a constitutional convention, in order to eliminate tenure for federal judges, who are appointed for life.

Said Lorge, "All the problems we have with pornography are caused by decisions of this sort. I will promote any legislation that will promote the sanctity of life."

Rogers takes a brick wall stand against abortion ("I don't even like to talk compromise") because "it seems only logical that the unborn has a right to life."

He can't see much difference between a death on a Vietnam battlefield and the taking of a life from a mother's womb.

"A woman has a right to her own body," Rogers related. "But an unborn baby is not part of her body. It's a new body."

That's why Rogers abhors abortion. It's why he won't sit back and swallow the decision of the seven high court justices.

Even before he returned to Madison today, he was making plans for a resolution asking the state to petition for a federal constitutional convention which he hoped will undo what the Supreme Court did Monday. He will ask the attorney general's office to help draft the resolution.

Congress would be required to call a convention to amend the constitution if petitioned to do so by two-thirds of the 50 states.

Two years ago, Rogers drafted a similar proposal, after a U.S. District Court in Milwaukee ruled that Wisconsin cannot prevent a woman from having an abortion in the early stages of pregnancy.

Rogers had proposed a federal constitutional amendment that would allow an abortion only to save the mother's life.

Constitutional conventions don't come easy, Rogers admitted. But, if last November's voting in North Dakota and Michigan were any indication of how people feel, he added, "it's worth a try."

There are many new legislators in Madison, but Rogers believes he will find enough support among both Democrats and Republicans for his convention resolution.

He'll ask for an amendment that will either provide federal protection for the rights of the unborn or leave the decision to the individual states.

Rogers also will ask for help from Wisconsin's two United States senators and from President Nixon. They might be able to work on an amendment from their end, he explained.

All of that will take time.

Meanwhile, abortion clinics will sprout like bad weeds, Rogers predicted. They'll be all over the state. "Abortion is the easiest money you can make," Rogers explained. "It's easier than medicare for the doctors."

If it takes too long to do something about abortion, it could become the big issue in the next presidential election, Rogers believed.

Few people feel as strongly about abortion as Rogers does. People have told him to cool it on abortion. "It could ruin you politically," a friend told him. But Rogers won't cool it.

He took another sip of coffee. "I've got to re-read that book, '1984.' I guess it's closer than I think."

total repeal of all the laws."

Said Boyer, "Until we have women sitting on the Supreme Court and in the legislatures of our country in numbers proportionate to their representation in the population—that is 51 per cent—it cannot be said that women's rights are adequately protected or their viewpoints expressed in our legal and judicial system."

Noting her disappointment that the ruling didn't go far enough, she asked, "What happens after three months?"

Boyer referred to her testimony during the last session of the legislature. "One of the points that I made in my testimony was that these laws were passed initially at a time when women did not have the vote and were intended to protect women against a hazardous surgical procedure at the time."

This is not the case today, she contended. "Today, abortion is almost safer than childbirth and even though we still have a male dominated political scene, women are certainly eloquent and competent enough to be involved in the decision-making process about what kind of legislation applies to their bodies."

Said Boyer, "This whole question about whether there is fetal life really has no place in the original legislation. Today we hear a great deal about the right to life to the fetus. This concept was never involved in the original abortion legislation which was intended to protect the rights of women to life and protect them against surgical damage."

She foresees a new dimension to the overall question. "Looking ahead to the future," said Boyer, "we're going to see efforts in the various states to allow more paraprofessional kinds of abortion clinics—a move to get it out of the hospital setting. It's a matter of all kinds of minor medical services for women where they feel they have been unsympathetically treated by the health industry and some doctors."

The Rev. Thomas MacLachlan, director of the Appleton Pastoral Counseling Center for the past 2½ years, concurred with the Supreme Court's decision.

Said MacLachlan, "I felt for some time that this was a matter for discussion between the individual patient and her physician."

He felt that the decision is "going to make it possible for people to both exercise their individual consciences and maintain a basic respect for the law," no longer making it necessary to "travel from state to state to exercise their wishes."

"From a moral point of view," MacLachlan said, "I think that human beings are provided with the free will to make moral decisions. I don't think they should be interfered with by any kind of law which attempts to legislate morality."

"As far as the actual decision itself, my feeling is that abortion is a bad last alternative in the control of pregnancy. I think that people should be responsible in exercising other less dramatic forms of birth control but, again, I don't feel that this last alternative should be denied to people if it gets to that point."

Officials okay Langedyke plans

Appleton plan commissioners Monday approved plans for the first of three phases for development of Langedyke Park.

The commission also authorized the appropriate city officials to sign applications for $43,550 in state-federal aid to cover half the cost of the first phase.

A major share of the work will be tree-planting. The portion to be developed first lies in the southeast section of the 100-acre tract near Northland Avenue and Ballard Road.

Also shown on the plan are a hiking trail encircling much of the project area, with the center section left open for special events eventually to include Independence Day celebrations, according to Park and Recreation Chairman Ralph Gertsch.

The celebrations have been held for years at Pierce Park, to the frequent complaints of neighbors.

Also shown on the plan are a picnic pavilion, community building, restroom building and a drainage course that follows an existing ditch and will eventually drain an artificial lake to be developed in the adjoining southwest corner of the park.

The commission adopted the plan and sent it to the City Council for approval after several members asked Gertsch, who is also on the commission in addition to heading the parks and recreation body, whether he was sure he is following the proper procedures to obtain the aid funds.

A letter read by Planning Director Jack Hetu from state officials asked for a resolution adopted by the council endorsing the park plans and authorizing-ing officials to sign application forms. It also requested several other items to complete the city's request for aid.

Gertsch insisted that those steps have been taken in the past and all he has to do is to get copies of city records and send them to the state officials. Plans commissioners adopted and sent the resolution to the council anyway on request from Hetu.

The total price of developing the park has been set at $375,350. It also is to include an artificial hill for toboggans and Soap Box Derby races, picnic areas, facilities for court games, roadways and parking areas.

The city already has begun development of a four-diamond baseball complex in the northeast corner of the park and has graded and gravel-surfaced a portion of Park Drive, which will cut across the park from Ballard Road to the west.

Public Works Director Robert Miller asked whether the drainage course should be developed before creating the artificial lake it will drain. Gertsch replied that his main concern is getting the aid application submitted. Details contained in the first phase application don't necessarily have to be completed before an application for the next phase is submitted, he said, so lake drainage plans can be coordinated. The details will resolve themselves, said Gertsch.

Lake swallows 3 cars but all drivers escape

Three men escaped drowning or at least an icy swim Monday but all three lost their cars through thin patches of ice on Lake Winnebago.

Bruce Peterson, 20, of 221 E. Marquette St., Appleton, lost his auto about 8 a.m. but managed to get out without injury. He and a friend in another car were on their way to a fishing shanty when the accident occurred.

Peterson told Calumet County Sheriff's authorities that the two became separated in heavy fog over the lake, and that he was driving about 200 yards off Waverly Beach when the accident occurred.

Peterson said that when the ice began to crack, he jumped from the vehicle to safety. It sank in about 65 minutes, he told authorities.

According to authorities, the other two cars went through the ice Monday about a half-mile off shore between Quinney and Brothertown.

One driven by David Puetz, route 2,

Chilton, went through about 8:30 a.m., and another driven by Arvid Johnson, Sheboygan, went through in the same area about 12:30 p.m.

Both drivers also reportedly escaped injury.

Calumet County Sheriff Ted Pagel issued a warning today to ice fishermen to use extreme caution if they plan to drive on the lake.

grade, surveys showed, the greatest drop in interest took place.

Westphal said the school had verbal commitment of funding and also would report at least annually on the program's progress. The summer project will cost about $11,000, with 30 per cent borne by the local school.

In approving the school calendar, the board considered calendars with starts before Labor Day. The board had indicated last year it wanted to seriously consider the early start so full-day inservice meetings could be held about mid-year, something considered educationally desirable by the board.

However, the teachers apparently were about equally divided on the early start, and petitions containing about 250 signatures of early-start opponents were turned in.

The 1973-74 calendar calls for no-school days on Nov. 8, 9, 22, 23, Dec. 24-Jan. 2, Feb. 25, April 5, 12-19, and May 27. The regular teacher orientation would be held the week preceding the Labor Day weekend and an in-service day on Feb. 22.

Hilbert girl hurt when hit by truck

A rural Hilbert girl underwent surgery at 9:15 a.m. today at Theda Clark Memorial Hospital, Neenah, where she was rushed this morning after being struck by a truck while en route to catching a school bus.

A hospital spokesman said Beth Mertz, 6, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Mertz, route 1, Hilbert, was expected to be placed in the intensive care unit after surgery. The extent of her injuries was not known.

According to a preliminary Calumet County traffic report, the youngster was waiting for a school bus on Calumet County Trunk Y at approximately 7:45 a.m. today. The bus, stopped at a stop sign at Drier Road, which intersects with Y, was waiting for a southbound truck to pass.

The youngster reportedly saw the bus and was crossing the road to the spot where she normally boards it when she was struck by the truck, which was driven by Erich H. Fuhrman, 58, route 1, Hilbert.

She was taken to Calumet Memorial Hospital, Chilton, by ambulance and immediately transferred to Theda Clark.

Coach-teacher couplet called unfair to women

MILWAUKEE (AP)—The practice of hiring men to both teach classes and coach sports is discriminatory against women, the Governor's Commission on the Status of Women was told recently.

Genevieve Marcoux of Stevens Point said the practice also downgrades the importance of expertise in academic subjects, discriminates against students who are not involved in sports and reduces employment opportunities for teachers who did not wish to coach.

Miss Marcoux, who has a master's degree in mathematics from Syracuse University, said she had been unable to find a job for two years.

"If they can get a man to teach mathematics and coach a sport, he gets the preference," she said.

youngsters should be started at age three. The involvement of parents increases support at home and improves the attitude of the youngster.

Miss Schlegelmilch said her young group had no fear of playing in front of the board but her junior high students, not in the Suzuki program, would be petrified.

The performance Monday night was highlighted by a solo by Samatha Charing, 7, who played LaFolia and variations. She plays at the high school student capability level.

Guthrie here Wednesday It's rough on the road

It's been an up-and-down financial struggle for the Guthrie Theater Company of Minneapolis since the repertory theater troupe's creation in 1963. At first the recipient of enthusiastic community acceptance, the company was plagued by declining attendance when Twin Cities area theatergoers became apathetic toward the acclaimed company in the late '60s. Lately, whether a result of the alleged "arts explosion" in the nation or the intensified efforts of Guthrie management, the resident theater group is on the upswing, enough so that with the help of a grant from the National Endowment for the Arts at Washington, D. C., Guthrie has been able to tour the midwest for the past two years.

Last season, the group hit 43 cities in eight weeks with "Fables Then and Now," traveling 7,000 miles in a five state area — Wisconsin, Minnesota, North and South Dakota and Iowa.

But it's rough on the road, especially with one-night stands, which was the case with "Fables." So for the 1973 tour, they decided to concentrate on 15 selected cities and do between four and six performances in each area.

The Fox Cities was one of the sites and Guthrie will open its most successful Minneapolis production of the season, "Of Mice and Men," based on John Steinbeck's best-selling short novel. It opens at 8 p.m. Wednesday at Neenah's Armstrong High School, with its excellent 1,600-seating auditorium, and transfers to Lawrence University's smaller Stansbury Theatre for Friday and Saturday night performances, both of which are sold out. There are tickets available for the Wednesday staging.

The Guthrie people don't merely come into town, perform and take the money and run. Rather, they do a great deal of advance work, helping local residents promote the event, plus providing students with their expertise via workshops.

This partially-federally-funded tour is a pilot project. If it meets with success, the NEA will fund several more tours with other repertory groups as widespread as Washington, D. C., Seattle and Texas next year.

Some cities go smoother than others. The Appleton area has had a few rough spots, according to David Hawkanson, associate manager of the company, and Carolyn Bye, director of sales, who were here recently. The main problems have been getting the general community and other area colleges involved in the project.

The tour not only benefits audiences who don't get much professional theater in their areas, but it also helps the Guthrie actors develop a contact with audiences. They get to meet people and, as a result, receive a better understanding of the kind of people to which they play.

In addition to the public performances, there will be two student matinees at Armstrong on Thursday.

Make Me An Offer I Can't Refuse!

Conducts workshop

Gary Parker (right, front), Outreach director of the Guthrie Theater Company, worked with a group of high school and Lawrence University students in a theater workshop at Lawrence recently. He appeared in advance of the Guthrie Company's production of "Of Mice and Men," which opens Wednesday at Neenah Armstrong High. Parker also will conduct a workshop at 1 p.m. Saturday in the Experimental Theater of the Music-Drama Center.

A hit and a miss

BY JOYCE ERNEST

Two new series premiered Friday night on the ABC television network.

"Here We Go Again" is supposed to be a comedy about divorce and the trials and tribulations of a second marriage.

The show's attempts at comedic farce becomes sadistic mockery since few people, especially those involved, find humor in the dissolution of a partnership. The exaggerated personalities and uninvented appearances of the ex-wife and ex-husband in the re-married's home are so unlike a normal situation that, although well-acted, their characters become obnoxious and are totally unbelievable.

The title may well be the clue to the success of the series. Here we go again — cancelled!

The second offering, "A Touch of Grace," stars the inimitable Shirley Booth who, as an aging widow living with her married daughter, strives to remain independent and young at heart.

The show has all the ingredients for a long run — warmth, tenderness, old fashioned sexy humor, inspiration. Topical issues such as birth control and social security are discussed with hilarious candor. The believable romance between Grace and her gravedigger friend conveys the fact that interest in the opposite sex is not limited to the young. We predict that "A Touch of Grace" will be long-lived.

'Laugh-In' all in but not Martin and Rowan

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Dick Martin and Dan Rowan are folding "Laugh-In," the brash, irreverent comedy show, but plan to team up for a new show next fall.

"We finally put it to bed," Martin said Thursday in reporting that he and Rowan had taped the final show, the 142nd, on Wednesday night.

Martin said he and his partner had wanted to kill the show this season, but that NBC had asked them to stay on because the advertising spots had been sold in advance.

"Laugh-In," which once held the No. 2 position in the ratings, had dropped to 35th in December.

NBA stars tonight

8-10:30 Channels 9-11 — The NBA All-Star Game pits the best players of the East against the best of the West. Celtic coach Tom Heinsohn coaches the East team and Lakers coach Bill Sharman coaches the West in this game from Chicago.

7-8 Channel 5 — There's a beautiful nature study as cameras follow The Incredible Flight Of The Snow Geese on their annual journey of almost 3,000 miles from Canada to the Gulf of Mexico. The color photography of the landscape and the birds is excellent with closeup shots of the geese in their nesting grounds and in flight. Australian wildlife photographer Des Bartlett and his wife Jen spent 2½ years filming. The Bartletts found some abandoned goslings, cared for them and were eventually "adopted" by the birds who thought they were their parents.

8:30-10 Channels 2-7 — Ed Sullivan returns to CBS to host The Entertainer Of The Year Awards, given by AGVA (American Guild of Variety Artists) to those who perform before live audiences. Recipients include Liza Minnelli, Carol Burnett, Sonny and Cher, Duke Ellington, Carroll O'Connor, Lorna Luft, Vikki Carr, Neil Diamond, Jimmy Dean and Tanya the Elephant. You'll also see Danny Thomas, Merv Griffin, Rip Taylor, the Mills Brothers, Roy Clark, Mac Davis and Pat Cooper.

7:30-8:30 Channels 2-7 — Hawaii Five-O has an intriguing case. Monte Markham plays a man who sets up a fantastic alibi for himself while he commits murder. The alibi is none other than Danny (James MacArthur), who is with him in Maui (except for 25 minutes) at the same time the man was seen (by viewers) killing his industrialist boss in Oahu.

8-9 Channel 5 — Alastair Cooke continues to narrate his fine series on America. "A Firebell in the Night" deals with the events which led to the Civil War. Cooke demonstrates Whitney's cotton gin from the Smithsonian and talks about Whitney's influence on the North with his system of interchangeable parts, the forerunner of mass production. From a black shanty town in South Carolina, Cooke describes the conditions under which slaves lived as contrasted to the life style of the Southern rich.

9-10 Channel 5 — Senators, members of the House and high-ranking offices of the armed services discuss the country's strategic nuclear forces on "If You Want Us to Stand Down, Tell Us," the first of a two-part NBC News White Paper. And When The War Is Over — The American Military In The '70s is narrated by Floyd Kalber and produced by Fred Freed.

Amherst Junction worms set for 'Tonight Show'

AMHERST JUNCTION — George Sroda, president and owner of the Magic Worm Bedding Co. here, will appear on Johnny Carson's "Tonight Show," seen on Channel 5 at 10:30 p.m., either Wednesday or Thursday, according to tentative guest lists.

Sroda, considered an expert on worms, has appeared on 27 TV shows throughout the midwest, on the "What's My Line" syndicated TV series out of New York and has been mentioned on Paul Harvey's network radio news program. He also is a feature on the NBC radio network with his Herman the Worm feature.

At his worm laboratory, Sroda has over 200,000 worms and worm capsules with which to experiment and gain research information on the little creatures. Sroda claims to have the largest private worm testing laboratory in the nation. It is not known whether there are any larger public worm testing laboratories.

Originally, Sroda raised turkeys, but switched to worms. "The turkeys are far long gone, but I don't miss them anymore, nor their gobble, for I have a new sound, the silent sound of the contented worms wiggling in their magic bed," he said.

Teen-ager likes cars too much

A 14-year-old Appleton boy's love for cars nearly cost him a trip to the boys' school Monday.

The youth, appearing in Outagamie County Family Court, pleaded guilty to a charge of taking a 1969 car from Al Rudolf Motors used car lot the night of Dec. 28.

Police were asked to watch the lot after officials of the firm noticed the car had been moved on prior occasions. A patrolman caught the boy hiding in the auto the night of Dec. 28. The boy said Lawrence professor wins fellowship for research in England

Bertrand A. Goldgar, professor of English at Lawrence University, has been awarded a fellowship by the American Council of Learned Societies (ACLS) which will enable him to pursue literary research in England starting next fall.

With the ACLS grant, Goldgar plans to prepare an edition of "The Grub Street Journal," which he describes as "a rare satirical newspaper published weekly in London from 1730 to 1737."

According to Goldgar, "The Journal is of unusual significance because of its relation to Pope, Fielding and other major literary figures of the day and also because of its relations to the journalism and politics of its period."

The project grew out of a book that Goldgar is currently working on which discusses the relationship between politics and literature when Sir Robert Walpole was British prime minister.

Goldgar will use the fellowship during his one-year sabbatical leave from Lawrence starting in September. It will enable him to work with resources in London's British Museum and other English archives.

he had found the key in the car earlier. He admitted driving the car around Appleton.

Judge R. Thomas Cane placed the boy under supervision to the Outagamie County Department of Social Services last September after he was found guilty of 14 offenses, many of them involving the taking of cars without consent.

A welfare caseworker told Cane that his department had been making progress with the boy and he recommended continued supervision.

Cane said that were it not for the caseworker's recommendation, he probably would send the youth to Lincoln State School. "You're building quite a record for yourself..." he commented. But Cane said he was willing to give the youth "one more chance."

He found him delinquent and continued welfare supervision until the boy is 18.

An Appleton detective told the court the boy "is really in love with cars. He can't leave them alone."

Surprising Foreman now calls the shots

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent
KINGSTON, Jamaica (AP) — The boxing world woke up today with a new heavyweight champion, a 24-year-old former delinquent whose mild manners and tender heart belie a pair of the most devastating fists the game has seen.

George Foreman sent Joe Frazier spinning to the ice blue canvas six times Monday night and stopped the fierce, hardpunching defending champ in 1:35 of the second round in a staggering upset.

Foreman appeared almost of the verge of tears moments afterward when newsmen swooped down on him in his tight little dressing room in the acacomb of Kingston's National Stadium.

"I didn't want to hurt him any more," he said. "I kept begging Yancey Durham (Frazier's trainer and manager) to stop it."

The swiftness of the turnover of boxing's most prized crown was almost unbelievable.

Frazier, a brawling exslaughterhouse butcher, had flailed his way through 29 opponents as a pro, knocking out 25 of them, and 22 months ago had beaten Muhammad Ali in the so-called Fight of the Century.

Matched against the untested

Foreman on this sultry tropical island in a bizarre atmosphere, Frazier had been installed a 3½ to 1 favorite.

Certainly, he and his supporters had no idea that he would lose the title under such circumstances and thus forfeit what promoters had said would be a $20 million extravaganza between Frazier and Ali in June, probably in Houston's Astrodome.

Now the heavyweight division is in disarray. Foreman is the new king and will call the shots. Neither Frazier, who insists he wants a rematch, nor Ali, who is waiting in the wings, is in his immediate future.

"I am not thinking about any big fights now," he said afterward. "I want a long rest. I want to go home and see my new daughter."

"After that, I want to go all around the country—to Houston and cities like that—and talk to kids. I want to tell them they can do anything they want if they try. I am an example."

The new champion received $375,000 against 20 per cent of the fight's gross while Frazier was guaranteed $850,000 against 42½ per cent, but it is Foreman who now is in a position to talk to promoters in million-dollar terms.

"I saw him before the fight," said Angelo Dundee of Miami, trainer for Ali. "I said, 'George, we want to talk to you after you win' and he smiled and said, 'you know, Angie, you're one of my favorite people.'"

Dundee was one of the few experts who predicted a victory for the young giant who grew up in a disadvantaged background in Texas, once played hide-and-seek with 5h cops and had his life turned around by joining the Job Corps.

A blow to boxing's big manipulators, who now must completely redesign their future plans, Foreman's triumph was heady wine for the Jamaican majority in the surprise crowd of 36,000 who almost filled the combination soccer field and cycling dome that is Kingston's National Stadium.

When the battered and bleeding Frazier was led to his corner and referee Arthur Mercante raised the right arm of the new champion, the crowd went wild.

Jamaicans had made Foreman their personal hero during the last week of his training. They even cheered him when he shadow-boxed.

Earlier in the day, Frazier had attempted to outstare the challenger at the weigh-in, at which the champion tipped the scales at 214 and Foreman at 217½.

"I'm going to sit you on the ground, George," Frazier warned his rival. But Foreman didn't scare easily.

Frazier, a renowned aggressor, who has whipped his opponents into submission with a head-bowed, bore-in attack that resembles a berserk pile-driver, came out swinging. But Foreman didn't back up an inch. His 6-foot-3 inch frame erect in his familiar stand-up style, he lashed out with twisting left hooks.

Snap. Frazier's head went back but the champion continued to move forward, swinging. Snap, snap.

Midway through the first round, Foreman caught the champion flush on his bearded chin with a thundering uppercut. Frazier crumbled to the floor but bounced up, taking the regulation eight-count.

Frazier hung on gamely but moments later, a pair of thudding rights dropped the champion a second time. Before the end of the round, a third smashing blow sent Frazier spinning underneath the bottom strand of red rope.

The champion's eyes were glazed and his legs were like jelly when he staggered to his corner at the end of the round.

As the bell for the second round sounded, Frazier came out courageously, throwing left hooks. A crashing right to the jaw sent him to the canvas for the fourth time.

The referee had trouble getting Foreman to a neutral corner. Foreman walked toward Frazier's corner and began looking at Yancey Durham, the champion's manager, as if asking him to intercede and stop the fight. But Yancey didn't interfere.

Frazier rose unsteadily to his feet and then—boom, boom—two left hooks by Foreman sent the champion reeling to the floor again. For the second time, Foreman pleaded with Frazier's corner to throw in the towel but there was no response. Frazier rose again and again a fusillade sent him into the ropes and down to the floor.

This time Durham jumped into the ring. The time was 1:35 of the second. It was over. There was a new champion.

Spitz top athlete of '72

NEW YORK (AP) — Mark Spitz buried his image as an Olympic choker under a wave of gold medals at the Munich Games and today was a landslide winner as 1972 Associated Press Male Athlete of the Year.

The mustachioed Californian polled 405 votes from a national panel of sports newsmen. Golfer Jack Nicklaus was runnerup with 62 and baseball pitcher Steve Carlton received 61.

Johnny Bench and Dick Allen, baseball sluggers from the Cincinnati Reds and Chicago White Sox, respectively, tied for fourth with 20 votes.

Olympic marathon champion Frank Shorter received 17, Washington Redskins runner Larry Brown 13, Heisman Trophy winner Johnny Rodgers of Nebraska 12, basketball giant Wilt Chamberlain nine and stock car driver Bobby Allison was 10th with six votes.

Spitz, a flop at the 1968 Olympics in Mexico City, churned to an unprecedented seven golds. He established a world record on every journey to the winner's platform.

His was the happy, heroic side of Munich. Spitz' final victory came eight hours before tragedy struck on that infamous Black Tuesday of murder and terror.

Spitz, a Jew, left in secrecy after Arab gunmen made a murderous intrusion at residence of Israel's Olympic team. He had to come home to feel like a hero again.

The team which spurts last could win tonight's Fox Valley Association headliner between unbeaten Kimberly (8-0) and co-runnerup Neenah (6-2) on the Papermakers' floor.

Both opposing coaches alluded to the tendency of the opposing team to play it close and then all of a sudden run six, eight or more points.

In other games, Appleton West (6-2) visits Oshkosh West (3-5), Menasha (0-8) travels to Appleton East (5-3) and Oshkosh North (1-7) ventures to Kaukauna (3-5).

Close observers of the FVA don't see as much difference in opposing teams as Kimberly's 2-game edge indicates, but Neenah coach Ron Einerson had an explanation why the Papermakers have come through the big ones.

"The league is balanced," Einerson said, "but the key is Kimberly was able to play together (as a team) earlier than the others. I know Jack (Wippich) has been upset at times about their play, but they spend a lot of time together during the summer and that puts them one step ahead of the rest."

"We hadn't been able to unify our club until Friday," Einerson explained. Neenah overpowered Kaukauna, 95-48. Fifteen players got into action for Neenah and 13 scored. "We have 10 or 11 men on the basic roster and others swing from the reserves."

"We played as well Friday as we've played all year. I was extremely pleased . . . we had an excellent defense and a much better offense . . . Kaukauna isn't that bad."

"A lot of players had excellent games, we got better rebounding from our forwards. Benny (Luebke) is the quarterback of the team and ball handling is an important part of the game. Brett (Huus) had a real fine game with 12 rebounds and 24 points. Tom (Spice) and Steve Suechting had their best games. Tom did a good defensive job on Giordana and Suechting had 12 points and 10 rebounds."

"Kimberly is a streak team. They'll stalemate you for a while and then run a string of points . . . that's what we have to guard against. They're primarily a zone defense, while we vary our defense but prefer a man-to-man," Einerson said.

He concluded, "We're more prepared than the first meeting. This is a big, big week for us." Neenah plays Friday against arch-rival Menasha.

"The way they (Neenah) change their lineup, we'll have to be ready for anything," Wippich said.

"They play in spurts. Before Christmas, they lost to Green Bay East . . . Since then they've come back strong. I was really surprised to see the way they handled Kaukauna."

Wippich feels the Papermakers must prevent the Rockets from executing their spurts. "If we let them get into one of their scoring bursts, we might as well throw the game out the window."

Kimberly had to survive a stiff challenge from winless Menasha last Friday. "We did a fine job against them, until the middle of the third quarter, then we let them gain the momentum. Instead of getting aggressive, we tried to hang on to our lead. That never works," Wippich said.

Kimberly has not beaten Neenah twice in a season since 1965-66 when it won by scores of 85-81 and 66-58.

"We're facing constant pressure with our unbeaten league record," Wippich noted. "Everybody is right on our heels."

Al Schlatter, Jayvee coach, did a stellar job of filling in for Waupaca coach Don Colbert Friday night, in what is becoming common place this season of assistants taking over because of wide-spread illness. Among the head coaches.

Waupaca was in a crucial game as New London had beaten undefeated Ripon Tuesday and gave the Comets a share of the East Central Conference lead.

After a close first half, Waupaca opened up its fast-break offense in the third quarter.

Schlatter explained, "We haven't used a man-to-man much, but it worked well against Winneconne and I thought it would get us moving. The change got us running and broke New London's control of the game. They were controlling the pace in the first half and were very patient."

The first Schlatter knew he was going to coach was at 4:30 p.m. when Colbert's wife telephoned. Schlatter called back about 5:45 p.m. An anticipated call from Colbert at the half never came.

"We could be about 11-3 if we had won all of our close ones," says St. Mary Central's Ralph McClone, who has returned to coaching after a 10-year absence. The young Zephyrs, who have lost a number of narrow decisions, including four overtimes, were "snake-bit" last weekend as no other team in the area has been. St. Mary lost back-to-back double-overtime decisions—to Roncalli and Fox Valley Lutheran.

Despite this twin heartbreak, McClone remains optimistic as he looks forward to the remainder of the Fox Valley Christian Conference schedule and the WISAA tournament. "We've WEST LAFAYETTE, Ind. (AP) — Purdue hardly played like a Big Ten basketball coleader Monday night, but it didn't have to.

Capitalizing on 24 Wisconsin turnovers and several forced shots, Purdue opened a ninepoint second-half lead and turned back the Badgers 66-59 to maintain a share of the conference lead with Indiana at 4-0.

Wisconsin, which had shot a school record 62.5 per cent in defeating Michigan State at home Saturday, relapsed to its seventh defeat in 13 starts, including 1-4 at the Big Ten.

"Ballhandling-wise, we've done better," said a frustrated Badger Coach John Powless.

"When I see 15 turnovers in the first half, and not many of them are caused by their pressure but by our own initiative, I'd have to say our ball handling wasn't very good," Powless said.

"It wasn't the most graceful game by either team and I thought our guards played lousy," he said.

Wisconsin's guards accounted for 16 of the turnovers, 11 of them by starters Gary Anderson and Lamont Weaver.

Still, the Badgers charged to within 60-58 with 2:30 left, but Purdue scored its last six points from the foul line and held the Badgers to a single free throw the rest of the way.

"We did not play very smart basketball in the final minutes, both in percentage shots and fouling," Purdue Coach Fred Schaus said. "It's good to be able to win when you don't play smart basketball."

The Badgers' floor errors and 34.8 per cent shooting offset Kim Hughes' 20 points and 16 rebounds. Leon Howard added 18 points and Kerry Hughes 11 for

New champion

Heavyweight champion Joe Frazier becomes the ex-champion (upper photo) as he skids to the canvas in the final knockdown of Monday night's fight in Kingston, Jamaica. George Foreman, who stopped Frazier in the second round, flashes a victory sign in the lower photo. (AP Wirephoto)

'I didn't realize he was that strong,' somber Frazier says

KINGSTON, Jamaica (AP) — "I could see Joe was hurt and I hoped I wouldn't have to hit him anymore," explained George Foreman after he stopped Joe Frazier Monday night and won the world's heavyweight championship in a one-sided upset.

"I just kept throwing punches—I had to do my job," Foreman said as he sat on a bench in his crowded dressing room next to his manager, Dick Sadler.

The tall, 217-pounder floored Frazier six times and won the crown when Referee Arthur Mercante stopped the bout at 1:35 of the second round with the former champion reeling about the ring, blood running from his mouth and his eyes staring into space.

"After the third knockdown in the first round, I looked over at Yancey (Durham, Frazier's manager) in the corner and with my eyes begged him to stop it. He didn't do it," Foreman said.

"I knew George Foreman was big and strong but I didn't realize he was that strong," Frazier said as he rested in his dressing room.

"I started to fight back when I should have bobbed and weaved," he said. "I was anxious to get at him. I should have laid back and let my head clear."

While Foreman's dressing room was filled with reporters and police and state militia security forces, Durham waited several minutes before allowing any writers into Frazier's room and then permitted only a handful at a time.

There was the atmosphere of a wake.

Foreman said the punch that started him on the way to stopping Frazier was a right hand to the body early in the opening stanza.

"I hit him and saw him wince," Foreman said. "A strange expression came over his face. I knew then I could beat him."

Foreman, his muscular body swathed in his robe and a towel wrapped around his neck, said he had no definite plans concerning future bouts.

"I am not thinking about any big fights now," said Foreman, who won the Olheavyweight championship in 1968 and who entered the fight a 3½ underdog. "All I want to do is stay still a while and appreciate what I have done, what God has let me do."

Frazier, who defended his title against Terry Daniels and Ron Stander after defeating former champion Muhammad Ali in 1971, said the lack of formidable opponents hadn't caused his defeat.

Ali gets into act

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Former world heavyweight boxing champion Muhammad Ali, stripped of his title for refusing induction into the U.S. Army, has claimed a part of the credit for George Foreman's dethroning of Joe Frazier.

"I knew I defeated Joe Frazier," said Ali in a phone conversation from his training camp in upstate Pennsylvania Monday night after Foreman scored a knockout over Frazier after 1:35 of the second round in their bout at Kingeen, Jamaica. "Now the people see how bad I did beat him."

Actually, of course, Frazier scored a 15-round decision over Ali in March, 1971, to gain undisputed possession of the world heavyweight crown. But Frazier, badly hurt by Ali in the fight, spent a week in a Philadelphia hospital undergoing tests and recuperating.

"I just didn't realize I beat Joe Frazier that bad," Ali said.

"When he fought two nobody's since the Ali bout I knew he was done," Ali went on. "Joe made a big mistake in his false illusion of being great. He didn't have no action, only eight rounds in two years.

"Eight rounds in two years for a slugger like him is not good. Boxers like me and Sugar Ray Robinson—scientific boxers—take off three or four years and come back."

Ali said he had four fights lined up now and wasn't thinking yet about fighting either Frazier or Foreman. As he put it, "I got $2 million to make before I think about fighting Frazier or Foreman."

Ali, huddled with business manager Gene Kilroy at the camp, said he didn't even bother to stay awake for the match. He said Kilroy woke him up when the results were phoned to the camp where he is preparing to meet European heavyweight champ Joe Bugner.

"My next fight will be bigger than their fight," the top rated contender said of the Monday bout.

Ali said he had figured Foreman would win, although he had said before the fight that he hoped Frazier would win so the rematch he has been asking for since 1971 would settle once and for all who was the heavyweight champion of the world.

As for a Foreman fight, well, "I bet he (Foreman) said nothing about fighting me," Ali said. "I'm the real fighting champion."

Ali was sure he was still the biggest draw in the ring. He said after the Frazier-Foreman fight, "All the world is waiting for me. All the promoters. All the contenders. They have to wait for me."

Turning back to that painful night in New York City, the only loss of his ring career, Ali's voice softened—the smooth cadence slowed for a minute—"I lost to Joe Frazier for political reasons. I lost because I'm a Muslim, because I refused to go to Vietnam." But despite the layoff that stayed his boxing career, Ali is still confident:

"I'll be here when they're both gone," he said of Frazier and Foreman. "The cream always comes to the top, so I'm still on top. They can take my title, they can take the Frazier fight but when I come out of this training camp you are going to see a different Ali."

Kareem, Barry bow out

NBA All-Star game set tonight

CHICAGO (AP) — With Kareem Abdul-Jabbar and Rick Barry missing, the West will be hard pressed tonight to score a third straight victory over the East in the National Basketball Association's 23rd All-Star game.

Chicago will host the classic for the first time and a capacity crowd of 20,000 is expected for the nationally televised contest, ABC, 8 p.m., CST.

Jabbar, the former Lew Alcindor and super star of the Milwaukee Bucks, announced his withdrawal gmonday night for "personal reasons."

Barry, the high scoring ace of the Golden State Warriors, suffered an ankle injury in Milwaukee Sunday and had to withdraw. Jabbar will be replaced by Bob Love of the Chicago Bulls and Barry's replacement will be Connie Hawkins of the Phoenix Suns.

It was not known to what extent Jabbar's withdrawal had to do with an incident over the weekend when seven members of a Muslim sect to which Jabbar belonged were killed in Washington, D.C. Jabbar once owned the residence where the killings took place but had donated it to the Muslim group.

Without Jabbar, West Coach Bill Sharman of the Los Angeles Lakers will have only two pivotmen—Wilt Chamberlain of the Lakers and Nate Thurmond of Golden State.

Tom Heinsohn will direct the East squad for the second straight year. Although the East holds a 14-8 edge in the series which began in 1951, the West won the last two games.

The West won 108-107 in 1971 and by a 112-110 count last year on Jerry West's basket with two seconds left. West, along with Los Angeles teammate Chamberlain, will be making a 13th

All-Star appearance to tie the record set by Bob Cousy.

Featuring the West attack will be 6-foot-1 Nate Archibald of the Kansas City-Omaha Kings. Archibald, the NBA's leading scorer, was the top vote-getter in the All-Star balloting.

Heinsohn will have two of his Celtics in the starting line-up—John Havlicek, who will be making his eighth All-Star appearance, and Dave Cowens.

Also scheduled to start for the East is colorful Pete Maravich of Atlanta, who will be making his first All-Star appearance. Maravich probably will team at the guard position with Walt Frazier of the New York Knicks.

Dave DeBusschere, also of New York, figures to be a starting forward for the East.

Lou Neuville slams 651; Wegner jolts 269 game

Lou Neuville socked a 651 series with a 235 game in the 41 Bowl League Monday night and a share of the league honors went to Willie Bolwerk for his 245 singleton.

Bolwerk finished with a 627 series while Don Remter also had a 627 with a 241 game and Ron Nettekoven hit 237-580.

Roland Clement cracked a 870 series to lead the Sabre Lanes Classic League Monday night. Roland had games of 231 and 244 with the leading series and hit 678 for his first three of the 4-game series.

Keith Gehring's 245 was high game in the loop and he finished with 772. Tom Geerdts had 225-867. Jack Stingle 242-243-821. Ed Schroeder 827. Keith Jameson 796. Colin Dowling 795. Joe Lopatynski 790. Jack Ahrens 786. Earl Clark 226-781. Ken Rohloff 225-781. Dan Mittag 779. Dick Mentzel 771. Max Ross 234-765. Bob Hannemann 232 and Paul Harvath 225.

Terry Wegner powered a 269 game and Dave Haas had a 640 series with a 225 line to lead the action in the Tri City League at the 41 Bowl. Wegner finished with a 625 series while George Schroeder 614. Glen Nau 607. Roger DeBruin 606. Joe Buss 598. M. Schneider 587. P. Curran 586. Gary Lutz 586 and T. Sahli 578.

Ebben hits 258 game

Ferd Ebben ran off with top honors in the Knights of Columbus American League at the 41 Bowl as he jolted a 258 game and 633 series. Harold Lippert had a 597 series. Jim Mielke hit 595. Joe Kronser had 580. Dr. William Keller had a 229 game. Gary Gritzmacher had 597 and Louis Dietz slammed a 579 series.

Dwain Nickasch had a 226 game and 633 series for top counts in the Appleton City Employees League at Sabre Lanes last night. Gary Knapton hit 575 and for the women's team. Marge DeYoung had a 530 count.

In the 3-Man Classic League at the Super Bowl last night, Harland Shorey had the highest 4-game series with a 848 which included a 234 game. Terry Shea had 824. Roger Koehn 822. Tom Hibbard 803. Steve Paul 796. Bob Badtke 233-795. Jim Pasch 232-783. Ken Gradi 781 and Dick Mittlestadt 780.

Leo DeCoster cracked a 631 series with games of 226 and 231 in the Heart of the Valley League at the Little Chute Recreation Lanes. Jim Kellenhauser hit 236-577. Mickey Brandenburg had 577 and Ralph Hopfensperger unloaded a 255 singleton.

Jim Weisgerber fired a 622 series while Mike Van Daalwyk had a 235 game and 614 series in the Builders League at Hahn's Lanes last night. Gene Patterson had a 226 game and 609 series while Tex Techlin had 603. Dude Hahn 602 and Keith Gehring 588.

Callaway hits 234

Dan Callaway rolled a 234 game while Mike Weinandt posted a 227 line and 603 series in the Twin City Men's League at the Twin City Bowl.

Harry Miller had a 234 game and Gary Neilson fired a 604 series to lead the Super Double O League at the Super Bowl Monday. Miller finished with 584. Bill Bogen had 232-578 and Mick Bell recorded 575.

John Oberweiser had a 610 series in the Knights of Columbus National League at the 41 Bowl. John's series included a 226 game and Ray Williamson hit 230 while Jack Gosling rolled 575.

Ken Gauerke swept honors in the Appleton Lutheran League at Hahn's last night with a 225 game and 602 series.

High games were the order of the night in the Sportsman's League at the Hortonville Lanes as Reiny Harp hit 247. Ron Hammond 244. Roger Retzlaff 234 and Ron Werner 232.

Recent action in the Fox Valley League at the Little Chute Recreation Lanes was led by Jack Lamers with a 622 series which included a 232 game. Jerry Lamers had a 236 game and 605 series and other top scores included Gerry Vande Hey 232-592. Bill Hendricks 580. Don Carter 227-576. Bob Eese 576. "Cunny" Hinkens 612. Vin Jansen 227-596. "Gabby" Jansen 575. Toby DeBruin 232. Ron Steffen 587. Dave Austin 576. "Chesty" LeNoble 577. Terry Van Bostel 579. Casey Reichardt 601 and Bill Verhagen 577.

In the Commercial Men's League at Sabre Lanes last Friday, Fred Reh hit 228-626. Jim Englebert 611. Gary Tesch 603. Bob Helms 226-595. Stan Prue 581. Tom Englebert 225 and Dick Frank 581.

Notre Dame's streak ends

Maryland trounces Wake Forest

By KEN RAPPOPORT

Associated Press Sports Writer

They struck up "Hail To The Chief" as usual when Lefty Driesell strolled into the arena, but the Maryland basketball coach got some sour notes along with it.

"Losing never does anybody any good," said Driesell, referring to boos he heard Monday night.

Driesell, who hasn't been too popular at College Park lately because of a recent crucial loss to Atlantic Coast Conference colleague North Carolina State, regained some of the popularity after Monday night's 105-76 victory over Wake Forest.

"We've been tight and scared in the last two games since losing to State," said Driesell, referring to a two-point loss at home to the Wolfpack two weeks ago that ended Maryland's unbeaten season.

Maryland, ranked No. 2 at the time, dropped to No. 3 in favor of North Carolina State. This week, the Terps are placed No. 4 in the Associated Press' latest poll—giving way to another ACC team, North Carolina.

In the other games involving ranked teams, No. 6 Indiana stopped Michigan State 97-89; No. 9 Alabama tripped Georgia Tech 89-83; No. 12 Southwestern Louisiana turned back Arkansas State 119-106; No. 13 Jacksonville blasted East Carolina 100-61 and 20th-ranked Purdue downed Wisconsin 66-59.

Maryland lost most of an 18point lead, then exploded for 14 points during a two-minute span midway through the second half.

Tom McMillen, who led Maryland with 27 points, scored six during the string while Jim O'Brien and John Lucas added four apiece. Tony Byers poured in 30 points for Wake Forest.

Indiana scored 15 straight points in a four-minute spurt and then coasted over Michigan State. Steve Downing scored seven of the points during the binge and finished with 22 for the night.

Elsewhere, Duquesne stopped Ntore Dame's five-game winning streak with an 81-72 triumph over the Fighting Irish; St. Louis took a 63-56 overtime victory over Southern Illinois; Vanderbilt nipped Kentucky 76-75; South Carolina ripped DePaul 84-66; Florida turned back Louisiana State 7370 and Georgia defeated Auburn 68-64.

Bobi Schultz jolts 608

Bobi Schultz crashed a 608 national honor count in the Ladies Classic League at Super Bowl Monday to highlight women's pin action.

She rolled lines of 198, 225 and 185. Other Classic leaders were Evelyn Myers with 551, Joan Kolosso 205-539, Bev Behrent 535, Micky Clemons 525 and Bea Albrecht 213.

Pacesetters in the Queen's Classic at Sabre Lanes were Betty Cutler with 210-596, Marion Lappen 577, Sue Schroeder 226-575, Mary Redman 564, Donna Tischer 205-543, Alice Patterson 538, Delores Bylewski 528, Becky Wilfling 205 and Ruth Ribble 201.

played good ball in the second half of the season — we haven't had a bad game . . . It's been hard, but we're getting our tradition going again. "McClone pointed out that he uses only one or two seniors in his starting lineup and has two sophomore regulars and five sophs in all on the varsity. The hard-luck Zephyrs ran into clock trouble at Manitowoc Friday, as a long delay seemed to erase St. Mary's momentum when it held a 12-point lead. Only six seconds had elapsed on the faulty clock though the ball had been exchanged several times — giving the Jets additional chance to catch up. And, in Saturday night's game, an official erroneously failed to give a Zephyr the second part of a 1-and-1 free throw chance in the fading seconds of regulation time.

Sylvia Porter Middle-aged become a 'new' generation

A new generation has emerged on the U. S. economic landscape — and although this may strain credulity, the astounding fact is millions of you don't even know we are here.

Yet, this generation comes to the U. S. full-blown and the wealthiest of all age categories. It constitutes the most important of all markets for luxury goods and services across the board. Its potential and its promise to America's manufacturers and to America's marketing fraternity are at least as magnificent — at least — as the allure and lures of the 20 to 34-year-olds about whom everybody talks ad nauseum and to whom all exciting designs and challenging developments seem directed.

Who is this new generation?

It is the 55-and-over age group — the middle-aged market, the not-so-young, the forgotten generation.

People living longer

"Today's average American is living at least two decades longer than his compatriot at the turn of the century," says Fabian Linden, the imaginative and perceptive consumer economist for The Conference Board. "Prior to the first World War, about 10 per cent of the population was over 55; today, the proportion is almost twice that."

"Modern science has given us a new generation."

Maybe it is psychologically understandable that youth is more glamorous to the American businessman than the no-longer-young — and I won't even concede the validity of that bias — but it certainly makes very poor economic sense.

Ponder just a sampling of hard — but to you probably startling — facts and you'll start to recognize how truly big the potential of this market is.

— The income of the 25 million families and unrelated individuals in the 55-and-over bracket totals $200 billion a year, almost 15 per cent more than the income going to the 20 million spending units under age 35. We outnumber the younger generation and we outearn that age group, too.

Greater share of income

— The over-55s head 25 per cent of all families earning $15,000 or more a year as against 16 per cent accounted for by the under-35 generation. We are almost more affluent.

— An imposing 28 per cent of all the money available for discretionary spending is in the hands of the 55-and-over generation as against 13 per cent in the hands of the young. More than twice as many who have not been young for many years have money to spend on what we want when we want it.

— While the responsibilities of the young are ballooning, ours are diminishing. We are supporting less than 5 per cent of the nation's children, while families under 35 are supporting substantially more than a third.

— And while the young are looking after children, making mortgage payments and investing in durable goods, we have already paid for our houses and have had for some time thoroughly adequate inventories of furniture, appliances, etc. The young homeowner is paying roughly 40 per cent more for shelter than his older neighbor — but he is not living better and, on the contrary, is not even as well housed.

Linden has assembled even more of these juicy figures to pound home the point — and they do dramatize it.

The older market does, of course, divide into two distinctly different segments — the not yet retired and the already retired — and there is no doubting that the younger of these two groups is the more promising to U. S. businessmen. But even the 65-and-over, Linden points out, will become a more important market for luxuries in the years ahead. By 1980, they'll have an estimated 14 per cent of income available for discretionary spending as against 11 per cent now.

What's more, a vital fact is that 25 per cent of all married men over 55 have wives who are under 55 — a situation which is likely to persist and which enhances the "potential" spending of this group indeed.

And where do the generations go from here? Who knows? Perhaps to another new generation as medical science lengthens the life span even more. The projections of the past have almost always turned out to be dramatically on the pessimistic side.

It could happen again — and again. (Copyright 1973)

DNR to obtain plans for Greenville sewer project

GREENVILLE—The town of Greenville has sent the plans for the Greenville sanitary sewer project and plan to Madison for the state Department of Natural Resources approval. The original estimate of $1,847,000 can be reduced, according to engineers, Donahue and Associates.

The sewage plant will serve 1,225 acres with the present 261 residences and can serve 3,366 acres with a population of 1,080 and can reach a future population of 5,200. The area will serve from County BB to JJ at Everglade and Greenwood road.

Construction plans are set for this summer and soil borings will be taken in several weeks.

Town officials agreed that the town assessor's salary of $1,400 isn't enough for the hours and work entailed. The town board and planning committee will discuss salaries for all town officials before the budget is set at the annual meeting, April 3.

Through federal revenue sharing, the town of Greenville received two checks totaling $10,435 that must be used for capital improvements. The funds will be used to complete fire equipment, to lower the insurance rate for the town and benefit most of the residents. A chassis for the 1,500 gallon truck and 500 feet of two and a half inch hose is needed.

A deed was signed for a parcel of land sold by the town to Jerry Loose.

Operators permits were granted by the board to Fred Blohm, Bernard Gauthier and Karen Johnson, who are employed at Johnson's Tavern at the intersection of U. S. 10 and 45.

Eagles to meet Friday

Members and prospective members of the newly organized Appleton Aerie of the Fraternal Order of Eagles will meet at 8 p.m. Friday in the Huron Room of the Conway Motor Inn. The charter of the new aerie is being spread, according to H. R. Hall, new aerie organizer headquartered at the Conway.

Myse, Cane file for judge races

Two candidates for the April judicial election have filed their nomination papers.

They are Gordon Myse, who will seek a full, six-year term as judge of the 10th Judicial Circuit, and R. Thomas Cane, who will seek to remain Family Court (Branch 3) judge for Outagamie County.

Both Myse and Cane were appointed to their benches last August by Gov. Patrick J. Lucey. They filled vacancies created by the retirements of judges Andrew Parnell and Raymond Dohr.

Myse, who filed his nomination papers with the secretary of state's office, is expected to have competition from County Judge Urban P. Van Susteren and Appleton Atty. Stanley Chmiel, both of whom are circulating papers.

If all three candidates file, there must be a judicial primary contest in March.

Cane is the only candidate for the county court post. Appleton City Atty. David Geenen had taken out papers but then changed his mind about running.

Henry Hofacker charged with kicking officer

A former candidate for Outagamie County Sheriff was charged Monday with battery to a police officer and failure to surrender his driver's license, when he appeared before Judge Nick F. Schaefer in Outagamie County Court Branch 2.

Henry Hofacker, 63, route 1, Hortonville, who was defeated in last April's primary election, was charged with kicking Sgt. Edward J. Metko of the Sheriff's Department, after reportedly refusing to surrender his license or license plates in accordance with a Jan. 11 Department of Motor Vehicles order.

During the Jan. 12 incident at his residence, Hofacker reportedly kicked the officer and slammed the door in his face, saying he would not surrender the license without a court order.

The DMV order to pick up Hofacker's license came after he failed to pay a $1,129 judgment against him to the American States Insurance Co., Indianapolis, Ind., which was granted by Judge Raymond P. Dohr in Outagamie County Court Branch 3 on June 17, 1971. The request through the insurance company was made to the DMV on Nov. 17, 1972.

The judgment followed an earlier automobile accident in which Hofacker was involved.

Schaefer disqualified himself from the case Monday and continued the matter to allow time for a new judge to be appointed to the case.

Nuclear plant loses again

MILWAUKEE (AP) — The Atomic Energy Commission has rejected a request that a nuclear-power electricity generator near Mantowoc be allowed to increase its output, a spokesman for environmentalists said Monday.

Myron Cherry, a Chicago lawyer representing private groups opposing the Point Beach generator, said the AEC's decision means Point Beach No. 2's output will continue to be held to 20 per cent of capacity.

Wisconsin Electric Power Co. had no immediate comment. The utility has asked for authority to increase rates about 90 cents a month per customer to cover what it calls financial losses caused by curtailment of Point Beach production.

Environmentalists said the Manitowoc plant would damage Lake Michigan ecology by discharging heated water from its cooling system.

The AEC has postponed increased output at nuclear plants throughout the nation while it studies safety questions raised by the deterioration of equipment at a New York generator.

An AEC appeals board earlier this month recommended Point Beach No. 2, sister generator to a unit that had operated at near capacity for a year, be allowed to function at up to 75 per cent capacity.

AEC staff investigators opposed the recommendation, saying safety issues hadn't been resolved.

William Mc Laughlin, Venice, Florida; Mrs. Harry Pawlowski, Mrs. Clem Rass, Rose, Donna and Betty Rippl, all of Menasha; one brother, Paul Rippl, Menasha. Funeral mass will be held Wednesday at 10 a.m. at Our Lady of Good Hope Church, Milwaukee. Friends may call at the Ferrick Funeral Home, 2025 E. Capitol Drive, Shorewood, Wis. Tuesday evening from 5 until 9 p.m.

GRAND OPENING

OUR NEW STORE IS LOCATED AT THE INTERSECTION OF WINNECONNE
AND SOUTH LAKE ST. IN NEENAH

The new Doering's supermarket in Neenah will be the biggest in the city. Located at 1003 Winneconne Avenue, the store will offer the most modern of conveniences for shopper and a wide selection of items.

Well-lit, wide aisles are one of the many features of the new Doering's Super Valu in Neenah. Six-layer shelves offer extensive varieties on all product categories. One stop will do it all.

U.S.A. prime beef cut the way you want will be coming from behind the counters of this department. Dan Roth, store manager, justifiably takes pride in the modernness of the new meat department.

When you walk in the front door, one of the first sights will be a unique feature for a supermarket, a complete, modernly-designed restaurant for customer enjoyment and convenience while shopping. Plan your shopping trip around a bite to eat to save time and effort. Also serviced in this area is a full scale delicatessen.

Hyphen decision backed

The State of Wisconsin has rebuffed petitions filed by North Central Airlines and Oshkosh-Winnebago County which ask for a review by the Civil Aeronautics Board (CAB) of its trial judge's decision to separate the Appleton and Oshkosh air markets.

In a brief filed by George Schwahn, assistant attorney general, the state rejects claims of North Central, Oshkosh and Green Bay that the judge's findings were in error and asks the CAB to deny the petitions for review.

The hearing judge, Joseph Fitzmaurice, ruled on Dec. 12, after an eight-day hearing in August, that North Central's route designation of "Oshkosh-Appleton" should be changed to just "Oshkosh."

North Central, Oshkosh and Green Bay all have claimed the hearing judge made errors in his findings of fact and that there also were prejudicial procedural errors.

In its brief, the state supports Appleton's contention of confusion and misdirection of passengers and freight because of the present hyphenated designation. At the same time, citing passenger boardings at Appleton, the state said "commuter carriers came into being and continue to exist because North Central's service has not served the needs of these passengers."

The CAB has not yet ruled whether it will accept the petitions for a review of the hearing judge's ruling.

St. Paul congregation names new president

FREMONT — Werner Warnke was elected president of the congregation of the St. Paul Lutheran Church here.

Also elected at the annual meeting Sunday were Leonard Rowen, elder; Melvin Maierhafer, trustee; Robert Kramer, secretary and Lester Doepp, treasurer.

Clarence Bartelt and Arden Kester with Herbert Shorack as alternate were elected to the finance committee. Pershing Cox was elected head usher with William Voight elected assistant usher.

Dennis Sander was elected to the children's finance committee; Robert Meydam, stewardship committee and Wendell Hilskotter to the board of education.

The mission goal for this year will be $20,500.

Lions to kick off Eye Bank donor drive

NEW LONDON — The Lions Club will meet at 6:30 p.m. tonight at the Rainbow Supper Club, for the kick-off program to solicit donor pledges for the club's Eye Bank substation.

Bill Allen, district sight conservation chairman, and Otto Cox, administrator of New London Community Hospital, will be the guests.

Police & fire

CLINTONVILLE — The volunteer rescue squad was called about 8:30 p.m. Sunday to the city of Marion for Harold C. Krueger, 61, 306 E. Garfield St., who died at his residence before the squad's arrival.

Heuer, Sievers and Stensrud Funeral Home, Marion, is handling funeral arrangements.

No-fault plan rejected

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — A proposal for a deductible clause worth $1,000 in no-fault auto insurance coverage was rejected Monday by a study committee.

Kenneth Clark, a Milwaukee labor spokesman, said a policy containing a traditional deductible feature could mean less costly insurance premiums for motorists willing to be responsible for the initial $1,000 in accident expenses.

But a Madison insurance company executive, Allen Gruenisen, described deductible clauses as "devices for sales at a lower cost."

Both men are members of the governor's No-fault Legislative Advisory Committee.

The committee is attempting to draft a bill under which accident victims would get financial compensation without having to wait for lawyers and insurance companies to decide whom to blame for an accident.

Four other no-fault propositions have been submitted to the legislature already.

The committee rejected Clark's deductible suggestion 52.

State Rep. Edward Nager, D-Madison, said a deductible clause might allow a motorist to save $14 annually in premiums while leaving him under the shadow of paying $1,000 or more toward accident costs.

The committee also discussed the role of duplicated payments to victims.

Gruenisen said no-fault insurance promises to reduce premiums by cur-

Coach-teacher couplet called unfair to women

MILWAUKEE (AP) — The practice of hiring men to both teach classes and coach sports is discriminatory against women, the Governor's Commission on the Status of Women was told recently.

Genevieve Marcoux of Stevens Point said the practice also downgrades the importance of expertise in academic subjects, discriminates against students who are not involved in sports and reduces employment opportunities for teachers who did not wish to coach.

Miss Marcoux, who has a master's degree in mathematics from Syracuse University, said she had been unable to find a job for two years.

"If they can get a man to teach mathematics and coach a sport, he get the preference," she said.

Heart Fund drive to begin at Fremont

FREMONT — The heart fund drive here will be conducted through the mail beginning the first week in February.

Mrs. Hilda Abraham, chairman of the drive, is addressing the envelopes, assisted by the past presidents of the auxiliary of the Wolf River American Legion Post.

The contributions are to be returned to her during February.

Heart fund donations are used in the fight against circulatory diseases, including stroke, hypertension and congenital defects as well as heart attacks, congestive heart failure and rheumatic heart disease.

Miss Olk honored by Rotary at Clintonville

CLINTONVILLE — Barbara Olk, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harold C. Olk, Clintonville, was recognized as the student of the week Monday by the Rotary Club.

George Spiegel displayed a collection of knives, some of which were owned by the older residents of the city.

tailing legal expenses. Duplicated payments might force insurers to increase premiums, offsetting the fiscal advantages of no-fault coverage, he said.

James Lee, committeeman from Milwaukee, said legislation should allow duplicated payments or guarantee reduced premiums instead.

A victim, he said, may have "paid for the right to collect" from two insurers.

If the committee is going to tell policy holders "they cannot collect on both policies," it should "figure out a way to take that off the cost of the premiums," Lee said.

The matter of dual compensation was submitted to a subcommittee, which is to meet within a week to begin drafting a no-fault bill for introduction before legislators go into recess Feb. 15.

The main committee is to resume discussions Feb. 9.

Bow hunters schedule annual award dinner

CLINTONVILLE — The annual awards dinner of the Clintonville Bow Hunters will be Feb. 3 at Bennet's Supper Club. The cocktail hour begins at 6:30 p.m. with dinner at 7:30 p.m.

Featured speaker will be Doug Burich from Marion, who will relate his experiences in the Canadian wilderness, where he learned to be a professional guide.

The highlight of the awards program will be the presenting of the largest deer-kill award. Dancing to live music will conclude the evening.

Jaycettes will tour museum before meeting

NEW LONDON — The local Jaycettes will tour the public museum at 7:30 p.m. Feb. 1, and a business meeting will follow at the First State Bank meeting room.

Topics for discussion include Jaycettes Week, Feb. 11-17, toboggan party Feb. 10, future directors meeting Feb. 17, and the years ways and means projects.

Counties get highway funds

MADISON — The state department of transportation has mailed checks totaling $410,800 to all Wisconsin counties as the final payment of supplemental privilege tax to local units of government.

The payment is the counties' 20 per cent share of the additional $2 automobile registration fee established by the 1966 state legislature. The additional fee was earmarked to finance highway safety improvements and law enforcement activities in addition to the portion returned to counties.

The funds collected after Jan. 1, 1972 are being transferred to the state department of revenue for inclusion in the "shared tax" account, along with the "privilege highway tax" collections also formerly distributed by the department of transportation.

Here are figures for four area counties: Calumet $2,427, Outagamie $10,659, Waupaca $3,801 and Winnebago $11,346.

Scout officials address Fremont troop during Sunday court of honor

FREMONT — The court of honor for Troop 45 of the Fremont Boy Scouts had William Julian Julian, scout executive of the Twin Lakes Council, as guest speaker with Evan Redemann master of ceremonies.

Former eagle scout and senior patrol leader Robert Stevens presented the Troop 45 charter to the Wolf River Post American Legion.

Skill awards and merit badges were presented by Melvin Maierhafer; second class presentations were by Loren Stevens and the tenderfoot investiture by Mr. Lynn Draper.

Receiving tenderfoot awards were Steve Ludka and Scott Albright. Second class awards were presented to Mark Bush and Dennis Vogt.

Serving on the scouting committee are Lynn Draper, scoutmaster; Melvin Maierhafer, chairman; Olin Mead, treasurer; Loren Stevens, secretary; Evan Redemann, institutional representative; and Robert Reimann, Roy Reichenbach and Earl Cole, committeemen.

Families of the scouts were guests at the Sunday dinner meeting at the Legion Memoria! Hall.

senators and from President Nixon. They might be able to work on an amendment from their end, he explained.

All of that will take time.

Meanwhile, abortion clinics will sprout like bad weeds, Rogers predicted. They'll be all over the state. "Abortion is the easiest money you can make," Rogers explained. "It's easier than medicare for the doctors."

If it takes too long to do something about abortion, it could become the big issue in the next presidential election, Rogers believed.

Few people feel as strongly about abortion as Rogers does. People have told him to cool it on abortion. "It could ruin you politically," a friend told him. But Rogers won't cool it.

He took another sip of coffee. "I've got to re-read that book. '1984.' I guess it's closer than I think."

Officers are installed for hospital auxiliary

CHILTON — Calumet Memorial Hospital Auxiliary officers were installed Monday by Mrs. Lester Nelson, a past president.

They are Mrs. Carl Peik, Chilton, president; Mrs. David Bolfinger, New Holstein, president-elect, Mrs. F. P. Larne, New Holstein, secretary; and Mrs. Henry J. Horst, Chilton, vice president.

Mrs. Nelson said two machines, dispensing hot soup and beverages, had been purchased by the auxiliary and were placed in the dining room and

Amherst church elects board members

AMHERST — Gary Onan, Joel Niesen and Harhart Elkins were elected to terms on the Peace Lutheran Church Board at the annual meeting this week.

Onan and Niesen will serve three year terms. Elkins will finish the unexpired term of Robert Danielson, who resigned.

Mrs. Charles Iverson Jr. was elected treasurer and Verne Hansen, secretary. James Guyant was elected to the cemetery board for five years.

Communion participation and council vacancy laws were revised.

Waupaca joins state plan

BY FERN SMITH
Post-Crescent Staff Writer

WAUPACA — The county board Monday voted 29 to 1 to join the state Law Enforcement Standards Program for its officers in the sheriff's county traffic and conservation departments.

Supervisors carefully examined the advantages and disadvantages of participation, but decided favorably because Sheriff Loran Frazier, Capt. Jack Penney and Rex Oatman, who head the law enforcement departments, were for the plan.

Dist. Atty. Gerald K. Anderson, who introduced the resolution, pointed out that if the county joined an individual would have to be certified by the Wisconsin Law Enforcement Standards Board before he could be employed by the county.

It also would mean that a person would have to complete the six-week free preparatory training course before he could be employed as a law enforcement officer.

"In short," Anderson said, "if a man can't satisfactorily complete the training within the two-year probationary period, I'm sure you don't want him running around the county with a county car, a county badge and a county gun."

He said the county also felt that a number of requests for state and federal funding in the law enforcement area were being set aside because Waupaca County stands alone in Central Wisconsin as not belonging to this state training program.

A number of questions were asked by supervisors, including if the state pays for all the training and for how long and if Waupaca County would be expected to pay when funds were no longer available.

Anderson explained that the six-week training program pays the recruit's salary and expenses. How long the money will be available is up to the state legislature, he said.

Supv. John Kafka, Clintonville, who later cast the single vote against the program, objected to it because, "as I understand it, the recruit must be certified before he can be sent to school." He thought it would slow down the hiring process.

Supv. Arthur Sturm, Manawa said, "We are going to give away our final hiring power to the state. I also can see that we are going to be left without a lot of revenue from the state."

"When we go out to hire a man now, we take applications, interview 10 or 20 top applicants, come to a conclusion at the end of our interview and hire the man on six months probation. If we join the program, the state will investigate that man from the time he is born. I don't see anything wrong with that... but, so far I don't think our law enforcement committee has done a bad job of hiring our officers," he added.

Supv. Gary Wilson, Town of Mukwa, said, "What the state wants to know is if the man has enough guts to be a cop. In an incident a few days ago, four of your officers were looking down the barrel of a gun, and if there had been a jitter head among us - there would have been trouble."

Penney, head of the county traffic department, recommended an amendment stating that no more than one employee of any specific department attend the training school at one time, without prior written approval of the head of that department. It was inserted in the resolution.

Temporary law enforcement officers will not be offered training at the school, for which the county would have to provide funds, without the approval of the law enforcement committee and the finance committee.

Effective immediately, the minimum qualifications for recruitment of a law enforcement officer, shall be: A citizen of the United States, possess a valid Wisconsin driver's license, have attained a minimum age of 20 years, shall not have been convicted of any federal felony or any offense which, if committed in Wisconsin, could be punished as a felony; possess a Wisconsin high school diploma or its equivalent; of good character; free from any physical, emotional or mental condition which might adversely affect performance of his duties; and submit to and complete satisfactorily an oral interview by the employing authority.

The program is not retroactive for present law enforcement officers. All of the municipal law enforcement departments in Waupaca County had previously belonged to the Law Enforcement Standards Program.

Abortion ruling stuns Rogers

BY BILL KNUTSON
Post-Crescent Staff Writer

William Rogers sipped his coffee and shook his head in disbelief. He had seen a sliver of hope when, two months ago, voters in North Dakota and Michigan soundly defeated moves to liberalize abortion laws in those states.

The people let it be known what they thought about abortion, Rogers recalled. The voters in Michigan and North Dakota had blunted the pro-abortion drive. Rogers was sure of that.

It was the minority groups — the women's liberationists, the zero populationists, the environmentalists — who held the pen that wrote Monday's historic United States Supreme Court decision removing most legal barriers to abortion in every state. Of that, Rogers was just as sure.

The Supreme Court justices chose to listen to the shouts of the minority instead of the calmer voice of the majority, Rogers insisted. Supreme Court justices are human, he lamented. They bend in the strong winds of public opinion.

The decision so bothered Rogers that he wasn't sure late Monday that he even wanted to stay in the race for state superintendent of public instruction. He was genuinely stunned. His initiative, at least for the time being, was bled dry.

The veteran Kaukauna assemblyman worked hard, in Madison and back home, to smother the fires sparked by those who want freer abortion laws.

Rogers is a Roman Catholic and he has eight children. But he insists that is not why he became the abortion opposition leader in Madison. It's not why he joined forces with two Combined Locks housewives who have organized a Fox Cities right to life force. It's not why, two years ago, he introduced a bill that would require death certificates for aborted fetuses.

Rogers takes a brick wall stand against abortion ("I don't even like to talk compromise") because "it seems only logical that the unborn has a right to life."

He can't see much difference between a death on a Vietnam battlefield and the taking of a life from a mother's womb.

"A woman has a right to her own body," Rogers related. "But an unborn baby is not part of her body. It's a new body."

That's why Rogers abhors abortion. It's why he won't sit back and swallow the decision of the seven high court justices.

Even before he returned to Madison today, he was making plans for a resolution asking the state to petition for a federal constitutional convention which he hoped will undo what the Supreme Court did Monday. He will ask the attorney general's office to help draft the resolution.

Congress would be required to call a convention to amend the constitution if petitioned to do so by two-thirds of the 50 states.

Two years ago, Rogers drafted a similar proposal, after a U.S. District Court in Milwaukee ruled that Wisconsin cannot prevent a woman from having an abortion in the early stages of pregnancy.

Rogers had proposed a federal constitutional amendment that would allow an abortion only to save the mother's life.

Constitutional conventions don't come easy, Rogers admitted. But, if last November's voting in North Dakota and Michigan were any indication of how people feel, he added, "it's worth a try."

There are many new legislators in Madison, but Rogers believes he will find enough support among both Democrats and Republicans for his convention resolution.

He'll ask for an amendment that will either provide federal protection for the rights of the unborn or leave the decision to the individual states.

Rogers also will ask for help from Wisconsin's two United States

Lake swallows 3 cars but all drivers escape

Three men escaped drowning or at least an icy swim Monday but all three lost their cars through thin patches of ice on Lake Winnebago.

Bruce Peterson, 20, of 221 E. Marquette St., Appleton, lost his auto about 8 a.m. but managed to get out without injury. He and a friend in another car were on their way to a fishing shanty when the accident occurred.

Peterson told Calumet County Sheriff's authorities that the two became separated in heavy fog over the lake, and that he was driving about 200 yards off Waverly Beach when the accident occurred.

Peterson said that when the ice began to crack, he jumped from the vehicle to safety. It sank in about 65 minutes, he told authorities.

According to authorities, the other two cars went through the ice Monday about a half-mile off shore between Quinney and Brothertown.

One driven by David Puetz, route 2, Chilton, went through about 5:30 a.m., and another driven by Arvid Johnson, Sheboygan, went through in the same area about 12:30 p.m.

Both drivers also reportedly escaped injury.

Calumet County Sheriff Ted Pagel issued a warning today to ice fishermen to use extreme caution if they plan to drive on the lake.

Hilbert girl hurt when hit by truck

A rural Hilbert girl underwent surgery at 9:15 a.m. today at Theda Clark Memorial Hospital, Neenah, where she was rushed this morning after being struck by a truck while en route to catching a school bus.

A hospital spokesman said Beth Mertz, 6, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Mertz, route 1, Hilbert, was expected to be placed in the intensive care unit after surgery. The extent of her injuries was not known.

According to a preliminary Calumet County traffic report, the youngster was waiting for a school bus on Calumet County Trunk Y at approximately 7:45 a.m. today. The bus, stopped at a stop sign at Drier Road, which intersects with Y, was waiting for a southbound truck to pass.

The youngster reportedly saw the bus and was crossing the road to the spot where she normally boards it when she was struck by the truck, which was driven by Erich H. Fuhrman, 58, route 1, Hilbert.

She was taken to Calumet Memorial Hospital, Chilton, by ambulance and immediately transferred to Theda Clark.

Family safe, but loses mobile home

AMHERST — The James Triplett mobile home on U.S. 10 near Lake Emily was destroyed by fire early Monday morning. The Nelsonville fire department was called about 3 a.m.

Heavy snow fall made it difficult for the truck to reach the mobile home near Amherst Junction, according to Walter Leppen, fire chief. By the time it arrived, the 14-by-65-foot home was in flames.

Mr. and Mrs. Triplett and their 18-month-old son, James, escaped.

The cause of the fire is unknown.

Hearing set on judge's appointment of brother

MADISON — The Wisconsin Supreme Court's Judicial Commission will hold a formal, public hearing Friday to determine if Outagamie County Judge Urban P. Van Susteren's retaining of his brother as public administrator is a violation of the code of judicial ethics.

The hearing, first in the yearlong history of the commission, will begin at 9 a.m. in Room 319 South in the Capitol.

The nine commissioners are not expected to make a formal finding or take other action Friday, according to George Alderson, the commission's executive secretary. The panel probably will ask for briefs after the hearing and is likely to put its action in writing later, Alderson explained.

The commission is limited, under present state statutes, to censuring or reprimanding a judge, Alderson said, but legislation has been adopted to strengthen its powers.

The commission, which early last year received a written complaint against Van Susteren (the name of the complainant has not been revealed), charges that the judge has violated the judicial code because he "has exercised his judicial duties in matters in which his brother (Joseph Van Susteren of Appleton) has an interest and has exercised his judicial duties in matters in which his brother appears as counsel."

Judge Van Susteren appointed his brother as public administrator shortly after he became judge of the divorce probate court (Branch 1) in February, 1965.

He repeated his contention Monday that he has not violated the judicial ethics code because his brother is an aide to the probate court and does not appear in Branch 1 as an attorney practicing law.

Judge Van Susteren has stated his contention, both orally and in writing, to the commission which had given him until mid-November of last year to announce Joseph's removal or resignation.

Van Susteren refused to acknowledge the order and his brother still holds the part-time courthouse job.

Alderson said the commission hearing Friday will be "just like a court hearing." An attorney will present the commission's views.

Judge Van Susteren is entitled to legal counsel, but as of this morning, he was undecided if he will retain an attorney. At first, when questioned by a reporter, he said he might take along his brother and maybe a couple of lawyers in an attempt to prove Joseph has never appeared as an attorney in his court.

The attorneys also might be asked to show that there have been no complaints from the bar over having Joseph as public administrator.

But later in the conversation, Van Susteren guessed he might appear as the only witness in his behalf. He believed that Friday's proceedings might be just a "rehash" of what has happened during earlier, secret deliberations by the commission.

Alderson said the charges against Van Susteren seem to involve primarily questions of law. He guessed there will be few witnesses at the open hearing.

Technically, a public administrator is an employee of the state, but he is appointed by and serves at the pleasure of the county's probate judge.

The public administrator in Wisconsin is not paid a salary, but is on a fee basis established by state statute. The law further allows the probate judge to permit additional fees if an estate involves more than the normal amount of work for the administrator.

In recent years, the part-time job has meant an income of about $20,000 for Joseph Van Susteren, an Appleton attorney.

Judge Van Susteren has admitted the public administrator's job is a "plum," but he further argues that it would be the same no matter who held the Outagamie post. Besides, he has insisted, his brother does the job well.

Session to focus on marriage

WAUPACA — The Waupaca County Association for Mental Health will hold its monthly meeting at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday at Dr. Mardeen Hall, the new activities center at the Grand Army home at King.

Guest speakers for the meeting will include the Rev. Donald Bazzy, chaplain at the home, and the Rev. Barry Shaw, pastor of the United Methodist Church of Waupaca. They will speak on "marriage and mental health — a look at strengthening the home."

The meeting is open to the public. The association's program will stay within its stated goals of developing and offering a comprehensive range of services for all mental disabilities, in an effort to aid county residents with mental illness, mental retardation, alcoholism, drug abuse, and other related illnesses.

A Directory of People Services also is being prepared by the association. The directory will inform county residents of where they can find help for a variety of problems ranging from alcoholism and drug abuse to adoptions, child parent difficulties, marriage, counseling and counseling for unwed mothers.

The directory also will list office hours, fees, and persons eligible for the services.

Persons working in the directory include John Hupel, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Sauer and Mrs. George Dobberstein of New London, Lee Dierck in the Manawa area, Bill Carson in the Iola-Scandinavia and Oudensburg area

Jim Thompson, Mrs. Jan Hanke, and Mr. and Mrs. Walter Kofolek in the Waupaca area, and Judy Steinhilber, Helen Jarbow, and Mary Lou O'Rourke in Weyauwega.

Officers of the association are: John Kofolek, president; the Rev. Neil Koss, of Waupaca, vice president; Mrs. Jarbow, secretary; Ruth Batty, of Weyauwega, treasurer; and Dr. Charles Brownlow, of Weyauwega, president-elect.

Infant is Outagamie's second road fatality

A 3-month-old boy became Outagamie County's second traffic fatality of 1973 Monday morning, when he was killed in a car-truck accident at the intersection of County Trunks S and J, two miles east of Freedom.

Daniel Oudenhoven, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Oudenhoven, route 4, De Pere, died from severe brain injuries caused by multiple skull fractures, according to County Coroner Bernard H. Kemps, who said the injuries were incurred when the infant's head struck the dashboard after the impact.

The infant's death came within 15 hours and three miles of the county's initial traffic fatality of the year, as Donald D. Denny, 35, route 1, Kaukauna, was killed Sunday night in a single-car crash on County Trunk F, one mile north of Freedom.

Police said the Oudenhoven car was proceeding south on J about 10:50 a.m. when the vehicle apparently went out of control on its own and struck the rear of a county snowplow-salting truck which was stopped at the intersection of S and J.

Both parents were taken to St. Elizabeth Hospital, treated for minor injuries and released. The driver, Robert Oudenhoven, 22, suffered a cut forehead, while his wife, Diane, 21, received minor time abrasions.

The driver of the county truck, Gene A. Buelow, 35, route 1, Seymour, apparently was unharmed, while his assistant, Ronald W. Maass, 23, also of route 1, Seymour, complained of back pains.

Chester Heim, 56, of Milwaukee, died of injuries received in a Dec. 14 collision, and Raymond C. Williamson, 23, a Racine motorcyclist injured Aug. 29, died Monday.

Thor Anderson, 62, of Mount Horeb was fatally injured Monday when his van collided with a truck on slippery pavement in Lafayette County.

Opinion

THE Post-Crescent

Lyndon Baines Johnson

Historians may very well note the coincidence of the death of former President Lyndon B. Johnson two days after Richard M. Nixon was sworn in for his second term. For in his inaugural address on Saturday, President Nixon announced the near end of the war in Vietnam which so sorely plagued his predecessor, and a dismantling of many of the domestic programs which Mr. Johnson dreamed would build his GREAT SOCIETY.

Mr. Johnson's sudden death revealed the extent of the physical as well as mental exertion the presidency extracted from this tall, once-robust Texan. Television viewers could not help but be struck by the contrast of his recent looks and the comparatively youthful appearance when he assumed the presidency in the hours of deep tragedy following President Kennedy's assassination.

He won election in his own name in 1964 with a victory of landslide proportion, and unlike Mr. Nixon, he entered the White House with overwhelming majorities supporting him in both houses of Congress. That first Congressional session under his regime was marked by whirlwind passage of program after program designed to solve from Washington practically every problem of America. It is those programs which President Nixon announced on Saturday he plans to emasculate.

The same Congress passed almost unanimously the Bay of Tonkin Resolution which Mr. Johnson interpreted as a mandate to escalate the war in Vietnam into a ground as well as air and naval conflict, building up our forces there to half a million men. Three years later this same President announced that he was not seeking re-election, so unpopular the war had become with great numbers of American citizens.

The combination of massive domestic spending with the terrible cost of the war brought on an almost runaway inflation which also complicated the President's problem with the electorate. And so this warm, friendly man left office with a sad sense of loneliness.

Yet in tragic retrospect today, it may well have been the military operations conducted under President Johnson which have enabled President Nixon to wind down and we hope shortly end the American involvement in Southeast Asia, notably the start of the Vietnamization Program to enable the South Vietnamese to handle their own defense.

The most notable achievement with which Mr. Johnson will probably be credited in history was the complete commitment of his administration to the cause of civil rights in this country, and broad reforms in the Federal Government to establish those rights.

The United States today is without a living ex-president. Within the month Mr. Johnson and his distinguished wife stood paying final tribute to Harry S. Truman.

We are all the poorer for the passing of Presidents Truman and Johnson.

To sing or not sing the anthem

The United States Olympic Committee reversed its earlier decision and ordered that the National Anthem be played after all at the beginning of the invitational track and field meet in Madison Square Garden. But the controversy over the playing of The Star Spangled Banner is not over.

It isn't that the anthem is impossible for most people to sing or that Francis Parkinson Keyes was on a British flag under temporary truce conditions when he thought about composing the song. There are other reasons why doubts have been raised about the automatic playing of the anthem at the beginning of American sporting events.

Two American athletes stood casually and chatted during the playing of the anthem while being awarded Olympic medals for their victories in the Games at Munich last summer. The attitude was apparently like the black salute given by another black American winner at earlier games in Mexico, to dramatize the opinion of some people that the United States was not worth standing at respectful attention for. Anyone with experiences in other countries can ably argue against this premise even when put forward by members of minorities who have suffered from discrimination in this country. But it is likely that many people have felt some unease at hearing the anthem before athletic events at a time when our foreign policies are so much a matter of serious controversy.

The issue serves to point up what may be a growing doubt about the place of athletics in American life or the apparent disparity between the reality of athletics and the desired image. The anthem is seldom played at other events except those connected specifically with patriotic celebrations or national meetings. During World War II it was sometimes played at plays and operas. Now a recording is used prior to The Championship Season, an award winning Broadway play about sick attitudes in sports. According to the stage manager, "a play demands a certain mood and the national anthem sets a counter tone. That's what makes its playing before The Championship Season so perfect. It's a kind of symbolic statement that lets the audience know what's happening in the country and the forces that shape these people."

Neil Amour, sports writer for the New York Times, wrote that "the reasons most often cited why the anthem is played at sports events and not at other entertainment events are tradition, patriotism and spectator appeal. Since the philosophy and structure of most sports in the United States have evolved from strict concepts, notably the authority of the coach and the team ethic, such thinking has been accepted comfortably."

But in these days of high profit professionalism, the exposes in several books by athletes and more than a little doubt that the best in a person is brought out by competitive sports, is this true anymore?

Hi-rise camping coming

There's hope ahead for those Americans bothered by such nuisances as ants at picnics. It doesn't depend upon insect sprays either.

Two young men in New Orleans have plans for some old rundown buildings they own. Hi-Rise Campers has been organized and if the needed cash or credit is forthcoming, future campers need not worry about vandals, cold feet, putting up tents or chopping firewood, not to mention such camping disasters as marauding bears, skunks in the vicinity or nasty hooting owls.

Hi-Rise Campers will be twenty stories high. While the lower floors will be reserved for parking, there will be 240 campsites on twelve stories, carefully carpeted in AstroTurf and with utility hook-ups. On the roof there will be a swimming pool (heated) and barbecue facilities. There will be a security guard in the lobby just in case of wolves, human or otherwise.

Future campers may come to miss the sounds of waves lapping on remote shores or early morning warblers. But they can look forward to sunsets over the city smog and Hi-Rise Campers aren't going to have tent roofs that leak. Probably there will be fish or venison stores nearby for those who want the authentic touch to their meals.

The idea is really unique. Those wilderness areas Sierra Club types are trying to save from bulldozers and ski tows can now be maintained with no people allowed signs at the borders. Parents and children who hanker for the frontier spirit can find it just the way their ancestors did on the outskirts of town only antiseptically packed and bottled. Just about everyone should be happy.

Petitioning legislature waste of time

MADISON — This is the season when numbers of ambitious, angry, or strong-minded persons spend great energy and time in circulating petitions to the legislature on issues that seem important to them. They then announce proudly that they have gathered in tens of thousands of signers among neighbors and others who support their point of view.

The issues are as varied as changing times, fashions and public opinion, from bingo games at church picnics to veterans' assistance, humane treatment of animals to probate reform, studded tires to the need for more stringent control and punishment of drunken drivers.

The other day the news wires carried such an item relating the great diligence and labor of those in the Milwaukee area who propose to force the legislature to "reform" the probate code to suit their objections. They obviously spent enormous energy and much time in collecting page after page of the signed names of men and women who may, or may not, understand exactly what the problem is and what is proposed to be done about it.

It's ancient symbol

The petition circulator and the signatories would be less keen about the device if they understood the legislative process more adequately.

Petition is an ancient and honorable symbol in the democratic process. The right of the people in this country and in this state to petition for the redress of grievances is part of the warp and woof of the society, as every school child learns.

But there are more effective means of communicating the individual's or the group's desire to legislative representatives than the mechanical circulation of papers for the amassing of long lists of names that are intended to be effective through sheer numbers.

Most of the organizers of such drives could deliver infinitely more clout if they selected a few dozen persons in each district to write by their own hands or typewriters their own views to their own representatives.

The idea that legislators on the whole see such petitions as arrive in the mails in large sacks during the legislative deliberations is strictly illusory. The clerk of the house reads the title in a monotone in the literal compliance of the rules, the presiding officer gaveling it to a committee, the committee chairman puts it in the file, the secretaries make a note in the journal, and the business is forgotten.

"HE SAYS HE WORKS HERE, BUT HIS ACCENT AIN'T VERY GUTTURAL."

Here's word quiz about flowers

Leafing through Frances Perry's beautiful new book, "Flowers of the World," (Crown, $22.50 and worth it), I devised a quiz about flowers. My own score would have been a paltry 40; see if you can do better:

1. How did the Latin phrase, sub rosa, meaning under the rose, come to signify something told in secret?
2. What is the origin of the expression "a bed of roses"?
3. What flower provided the natural flavoring known as vanilla?
4. From what flower did unmarried men get to be called "bachelors"?
5. What flower was largely responsible for losing a war?
6. What national flag is a flower?
7. What flower is cited in the Bible as a cure for sterility?
8. What flower did the French fleur-de-lis come from?
9. What flower is used for making cakes?
10. What species of flower gives us tea?

ANSWERS:

1. Cupid's gift of a rose — the emblem of love — to Harpocrates, the god of Silence, as a bribe not to reveal the amours of Venus. Thus, when secret matters were discussed in ancient times, a rose was suspended from the ceiling and what took place beneath it was strictly "sub rosa."
2. In Sybaris, an early city of Italy, the luxuriously affluent citizens slept on mattresses filled with rose petals. (See

"Sybarites.")

3. Before synthetics, the flavoring, vanilla, was extracted from the seed pods of a tropical American climbing orchid.
4. University students in the Middle Ages were called "Baccalauraeus" from the laurel berry adorning their heads; since they were forbidden to marry, all unmarried men came to be called "bachelors."

5. Mark Anthony failed to conquer the Parthians in large part because his troops were poisoned by munching on deadly nightshade.
6. The "Rising Sun" in the Japanese flag is not a sun at all, but really a yellow chrysanthemum with a central disc and 16 flaring petals; the chrysanthemum was the Mikado's personal emblem, and only royalty was allowed to grow it.

7. Mandrake, by which Rachel conceived Joseph, in the book of Genesis.
8. From the Iris, chosen by Louis VII as his emblem in the Crusades. (Oddly enough, seeds of this same species were used as a coffee substitute.)
9. Crocus — saffron crocus cakes are still eaten in England, although it takes 4,300 flowers to provide one ounce of saffron!

10. The Camellia gives us tea, from a species, sinensis, with fragrant white flowers and evergreen leaves. (Incidentally, tea was introduced into North America several years before it was known in England.)

Nixon seeking place in history

Well-meaning people are pleased to believe that, for the sake of his place in history, President Nixon will project himself during his second term as a focus of national unity.

But the forces now shaping American history are not all that benign. And Mr. Nixon, to do him justice, is a serious figure — not one of the Rover Boys.

To be sure, the basic thrust of American domestic affairs for most of the past century has been benign. Government has assumed responsibility for managing the economy so that there are no depressions.

Regulation and taxation have increasingly curbed the arbitrary power of the plutocracy. Ordinary people have benefited from federal payments for education, health and old age, and from policies fostering the growth of trade unions and cooperatives. From Theodore Roosevelt to Lyndon Johnson, in short, there has been practically steady progress towards a welfare state.

But these policies have become vested in an enormous, entrenched federal bureaucracy, dedicated to its own self preservation. The most recent effort to help people in trouble — the Great Society — proved to be a failure in many of its most widely ballyhooed programs.

Moreover, the character of people in trouble in this country has changed dramatically. Before the Great Society, government programs were aimed mainly at helping those who required only an opportunity to help themselves. In contrast, the Great Society focused on people who needed more than equal opportunity — notably the urban blacks. It tried to help people who, because of weighty cultural disadvantages, needed special favors.

The change in the nature of those in trouble has been matched by a change in the nature of the great majority — the group I have called Middle America. Full employment has tended to dull the edge of sympathy for the minority without jobs — the more so as inflation has worked to disappoint the expectations of working people.

The net result is a widespread bias against the federal bureaucracy, against its social programs, against their supposed beneficiaries. The central fact of national life at present is that the majority will not accept higher taxes to pay for more federal programs to help the disadvantaged.

Nobody is more alert to that fact of national life than Mr. Nixon. He is President not because he was "sold" to the country but because he is instinctively at one with the ruling values of the American majority. He shares the majority's faith in the virtues of industry, thrift and the regular life. He deeply dislikes the welfare state and its vast bureaucratic apparatus. He is prepared to see those who do not do well in life's race — whether Vietnamese peasants or urban blacks — pay the penalties for failure.

So Mr. Nixon's place in history does not lie in continuing the work of his predecessors from Theodore Roosevelt through Lyndon Johnson. It lies in winding down the federal bureaucracy, in cutting out the old programs, in passing the authority from Washington back to the towns and suburbs and states.

I have no doubt that Mr. Nixon is now moving to seize that historic chance. He is not kidding when he talks about budgetary discipline and curbing the power of Washington. A major reason for doing business through a tiny knot of trusted lieutenants is precisely so that they can prevent the growth of new federal programs. A main reason for standing aloof from the Congress and the bureaucracy and the press is to prevent them from reducing him to compromise his design.

I have some doubts as to whether, even so, Mr. Nixon will accomplish his purposes. If he continues to rely entirely on executive authority to break the federal bureaucracy, there will surely be great dissension in Washington and the country.

The private letter is read, filed, acknowledged, and thought about by the legislator to whom it is addressed, and especially if it is truly original and appears to represent a theme that has inspired other correspondents who are voters in the district represented by the target representative or state senator.

It's easily contrived

The politician requires no especially acute perception to know that such pressure is easy to contrive. Signatures can be falsified. There is the widely known tendency for Americans to sign anything that is put before them with a reasonably plausible explanation.

A contemporary among Madison reporters continues to regale colleagues about the stunt in his cubhood when he collected on Capitol Square — which is presumably populated by more than ordinarily sophisticated persons — a bale of signatures on a petition renouncing whole sections of the Declaration of Independence and major portions of the Bill of Rights. It made a good story and it made an important point.

Equally futile for the most part are the prefabricated messages prepared for the signature of others by a pressure group leader or lobbyist and then copied so faithfully that they give the game away.

But the basic objective of simplifying and breaking down federal authority seems right to me. It reflects feelings deeply held in the country at large, and the Democrats cannot successfully oppose the President unless they, too, face up the overwhelming public dissatisfaction with the traditional system.

Farmers consider cattle stock

100 YEARS AGO

The Crescent, Feb. 1, 1873.

The club met at Perrot Schoolhouse on Saturday evening, Jan. 18th, President Louis Perrot in the chair. The question for discussion was "The Propriety of Purchasing Blooded Stock."

The merits and demerits of the different breeds for this locality were discussed by Mr. Dey, Mr. J. Lewis, Matthew Culbertson, A. P. Lewis, Charles Sweetser and others, who were of nearly one and the same opinion in regard to the kind of blooded stock we should introduce to this locality.

We want, they said, cattle adapted to our soil and climate; cattle which can be profitably fed; cattle which will make the best return for the labor and produce bestowed upon them. From the recorded success and experience of others in raising short-horn cattle in localities and climate similar to ours, they do not hesitate to show a preference for that breed. Vice-President J. Culbertson and N. Smith were opposed, saying the short-horns require so much food that it would be difficult for farmers with small farms and small capital to keep them in a condition that would in any way be profitable.

State agencies make construction request

Post-Crescent Madison bureau

MADISON—Department by department, state agencies spelled out construction requests to Gov. Patrick J. Lucey Monday, in the face of his months-old "austerity" orders and in the face of a Lucey administration recommendation to cut the requests for $155 million to $42 million for the coming two years.

With the tone for the daylong session set by a polite meeting between Lucey and University of Wisconsin President John C. Weaver, agencies outlined their requests and differences with the department of administration, which recommended the far lower figure in the wake of Lucey's warning last year that only "emergency" construction should be planned for 1973-75.

Lucey faced Weaver, who 10 days ago blasted the governor for what Weaver told his regents were "political" attacks on the UW operating and building budget requests for the coming two years.

Lucey and Weaver did not refer to the UW president's recent speech, underlining comments from Lucey administration sources that the governor does not intend to get into a public fight with Weaver, appointed by an all Republican regent board. The Democratic governor intends instead to let Weaver rest with the public reaction to the fight instead, according to sources close to him.

The recommendations for the UW budget, trimmed from $120 million to $25.8 million by the administration department's Bureau of Facilities Management, were drafted before Weaver's speech.

The Building Commission, headed by Lucey, will not take formal action on the BFM recommendations and the agency requests until late February, after the commission meets again to devote an extensive session Feb. 12 to the proposed $32 million second phase of the medical center on the Madison campus.

Lucey proposed that consideration of the medical center be deferred so that more time can be devoted to the BFM recommendation that the second phase be deferred for two years. Construction of the first phase is slated to start this spring. There have been questions raised regarding the ability of the state to start the second phase during the budgeted construction period in 1973-75.

Lucey had attacked the original UW building budget for being a "pork barrel," pointing out that all 13 four-year campuses received at least one major project in the original $120 million proposal.

Regents met hurriedly last week, however, to cut about $24 million from the original request list, bringing the new total to $72.7 million.

Regents and UW officials stressed at the time that they were responding to new and lower enrollment projections, rather than to pressure from Lucey.

Administration Secretary Joe Nussbaum underlined such changing state requirements in explaining the low BFM recommendations. Within the past decade, state officials faced pressing mental health facility needs, overcrowded prisons and bulging college campuses, he said. State institutions in many cases are now operating at 50 to 75 per cent of capacity, he said.

With the already-approved college buildings about to be built, the state will exceed space standards for its colleges this year, he said.

UW officials put special stress on physical education facilities for the Green Bay and Milwaukee campuses, pointing out that both schools now operate without adequate space.

Weaver said that he believes physical education space is needed to allow students to work off "latent energy" they might otherwise use in protest marches.

UWGB Chancellor Edward Weidner told commission officials that the $4.3 million building the administration department recommended for deferral was essential both for the academic program of the new campus and to insure that all state students are treated equally.

Other schools have such facilities, he said. The building is needed for education programs at the school and to allow residential and commuting students a chance to intermingle, he said.

The administration department recommendations include $512,000 for a maintenance building at Green Bay, and $946,000 for a similar building at the UW-Oshkosh.

Other agency requests and administration department recommendations are to be reviewed during the next month, include:

Health and Social Services—$12.7 million trimmed to $3.6 million. Secretary Wilbur Schmidt said of the $10.5 million in major construction proposed, all but $1 million was aimed at aiding the retarded in state institutions.

Administration—$5.2 million, cut to $374,000.

Military Affairs—$2.5 million, dropped to $1.4 million.

Veterans Affairs—$5.8 million, down to $171,000.

Transportation—(excludes highways) $3.2 million, reduced to $148,000.

Natural Resources—$2.8 million, cut to $37,000.

Educational Communications Board—$1.5 million, reduced to $166,000.

State Historical Society—$948,000, all recommended for approval.

Public Instruction—$787,000, reduced to $490,000.

Land acquisition would add $750,000 to the administration recommendations, as advance planning funds would increase the reduced total by $1.5 million, and deferred maintenance would increase it by $6.7 million.

Drug laws, enforcement change

(First of a series)

By JONATHAN P. WOLMAN
Associated Press Writer

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — More Wisconsin residents than ever before are being arrested on drug charges—nearly one of every 1,000; but the number spending time in state prisons is on the decline.

Figures indicate society is attempting to deal less harshly with offenders, even though their numbers appear to be growing.

In mid 1972, latest official statistics show there were 110 persons behind bars on drug charges, down from a peak of 133 only six months earlier.

The trend is rooted in the subtle evolution of state drug laws.

It is leaving its mark on state agencies, especially in the division of Corrections, where drug offenders are finding their way out of the institutions and onto the probation caseload.

Wisconsin drug laws have undergone a steady series of revisions since lawmakers began addressing themselves to the problems of drug use in the late 1960s.

Toward the end of 1969, the legislature passed and sent to then Gov. Warren P. Knowles the first wholesale revision of state drug laws since they were originally enacted in 1930.

When Knowles signed the bill in 1970, marijuana was reclassified as a dangerous drug rather than a narcotic, and its use and possession was made a misdemeanor rather than a felony.

Just as important, the law provided for first offenders to be placed on "probation without conviction."

The law allows a judge to place first offenders on probation for up to two years before they are formally convicted and sentenced.

If an offender completes the probation successfully, the judge can drop the charges, leaving the offender's record clean.

The Uniform Controlled Substances Act, based on a federal model which has been adopted by more than 35 states, took effect in October 1972.

It expanded the reclassification of drugs, drawing the users of such synthetics as LSD into the misdemeanor field.

What had been described as a "non-problem" in the early 1960s blossomed into a fullfledged crisis for the state criminal justice system before the decade was out.

The new laws were enacted to reflect a new attitude directing public anger away from the users of the so-called soft drugs, and toward drug dealers and narcotics users.

"I'd say there was a close relationship in time between an awful lot of people smoking marijuana and the laws being changed," said a Department of Corrections official.

"Drugs have become a middle class concern," said Jack Stoddard, assistant director of the Bureau of Institutions "Ten years ago it was a non-problem."

Figures support Stoddard's point. "The total of drug offenders in state institutions between 1964 and 1968 was 121," he noted.

In 1969 the drug population in state prisons hit 87, and by the time Gov. Patrick J. Lucey had signed the Controlled Substances Act in 1972, a total of 133 drug offenders were spending their days in the care of the state institutional officers. These included only convicted felons.

"Things are changing," Stoddard said. "We're seeing stuff coming out of the boondocks—Hayward, Eagle River

... The problem is everywhere. The drug culture has spread."

As it spread, public attitudes began to change, and the law began to bend.

Enforcement, including Atty. Gen. Robert Warren's office, has felt the winds of change as well.

"Whatever Warren's convictions," one statehouse observer noted, "he is a smart politician. He was the first to sense public anger with the hard drug problem. He's turning state drug enforcement around."

Though Warren has declared war on hard drug distributors on many occasions, his critics claim his agents come up with too many marijuana smokers, and not enough dealers.

Warren's policies are clear enough, though, as they were most recently articulated in a letter to Lucey.

"Based on budgetary limitations, manpower limitations and common sense, the narcotics and dangerous drugs enforcement unit does not waste its energies on tracking down misdemeanants," he told Lucey.

Warren has answered his critics, saying in part, "those persons charged with possession of drugs are usually the result of raids conducted (against distributors) by this division."

One high Justice Department official pointed to the high number of arrests for marijuana possession and said, "I believe that fully one-half of these were necessary to get heroin dealers."

Meanwhile, the number of arrests continue upward, and it is still the case that most arrests are of dangerous drug users, and not narcotics suppliers.

From a total of 2,407 adults arrested on various drug violations in 1970, the total increased to almost 2,900 in 1971.

Eight-seven per cent of these arrests were directed against "marijuana and other dangerous non-narcotic drugs," according to the Justice Department.

In 1971, nearly one out of every 1,000 persons living in Wisconsin was arrested for a drug-related offense, and the number probably will go up when final 1972 figures are in.

While the number of arrests has gone up, the number of offenders institutionalized has gone down. After reaching its peak of 133 drug offenders in December, 1971, the drug population in state institutions began to decline.

The present drug population of about 110 is the lowest since 1970, and while the over-all population of adults in state prisons had dropped drastically in recent years, the proportion of drug offenders is down as well.

Perry Baker, head of the correction's research and evaluation section, pointed out, "the courts, the prosecutors, and now even the police are using alternatives to the prison system."

Stoddard added, "there's no one left under the old statute. My guess is that the figure of 110 to 120 is stable. We will decline up to the point misdemeanors begin to fail and come into the institutions as repeaters."

a combined commitment to stabilize hospital costs

Because of the concern and foresight of the Wisconsin Hospital Association and its member institutions, a new set of standards for approving or disapproving all changes in hospital charges has been established. This was no small job. There were many tough problems to face.

The result is a unique program, fair to all concerned, designed to hold the line on rising hospital costs.

Briefly, here's how it works:

A hospital that wants to raise a rate, submits its request and supporting facts to Blue Cross 90 days before the date on which the increase is to take place.

Our cost analysts study the request in depth, making detailed cost comparisons. Their recommendation goes to a special Rate Review Committee for a decision . . . pro or con. When a request is denied, the hospital can carry its case to an Appeals Board. Their decision is final and binding.

Both the Rate Review Committee and Appeals Board are comprised of representatives of industry, labor, hospitals, the medical profession, the Wisconsin Hospital Association and Blue Cross. All are knowledgeable professionals . . . committed to controlling health-care costs.

A primary objective of the program is to avoid costly duplication of facilities.

Implementing programs like this is part of our commitment to you — Blue Cross and Surgical Care Blue Shield subscribers — and to employers who provide our coverage.

We are out to do everything we can to help stabilize health-care expenses. We regard this as a major responsibility to the million and a half Wisconsin people who depend on us.

We're involved. We're committed.

Victory over smoking a time for rejoicing

This is the concluding part of a first-hand report on kicking the cigarette habit.

By SONYA ZALUBOWSKI
Associated Press Writer

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Day one: my head felt like it was stuffed with cotton as I bumped through work with visions of a giant cigarette, dangling always out of reach.

Acting a bit like a saint, courageous and strong, I had sworn off cigarettes the night before, following the first meeting of the Seventh-day Adventists' five-day plan to break the habit.

By mid-afternoon, the lightheadedness had given way to exhaustion and the last powers of my concentration were sapped. But, I was still able to observe how much power the cigarette had had over me.

I hadn't felt as miserable since the last time I'd had a fight with a close friend.

All this was as Roy Wightman, moderator of the antismoking course had predicted. I had two things to hang onto: my little red book of instructions and Wightman's assurance that things would get better.

The red book was literally something to hang onto, instead of a cigarette. It detailed what to do with yourself until you returned for day two of the course at a suburban hospital.

Short walks, deep breaths of air and fruit juices made up the first day's routine. If possible, you were to fast from solid food and above all else, avoid what had normally been associated with smoking—including certain friends and coffee breaks.

Alcohol and caffeine were definitely forbidden during the withdrawal period which extended over one week.

At the end of that period, the chemical addiction to nicotine should have been erased.

The 100 participants in the course had already dwindled some by the second night as it became apparent there was to be no miracle cure, simply will power.

A somewhat grumpy group answered Wightman's query on how everyone felt by muttering, "lousy."

He came right back with another health fact.

"You'd have to be 90 pounds overweight to put the same strain on your body as heavy smoking," he said.

Just the night before we'd learned three out of four lung cancer cases were smokers.

Dr. Donald Wood of Brookfield told the story of emphysema, chronic pulmonary disease where the lungs cannot expel air. He showed films of stricken people who had to carry their own oxygen supply with them.

Besides the long-range possibility of developing emphysema through smoking, Dr. Wood said an immediate effect of the habit was paralysis of cilia in the lungs. The hair-like cilia act as sweepers to clean out foreign substances.

By the third day, testiness had gotten to me. Things began to get done fast wherever I could control them or my temper flew.

I still felt as though I had lost a good friend and, worse yet, there wasn't much I could do about it. Everyone at work knew I was taking the course and I couldn't very easily just quit attending and return to cigarettes.

But, there were also pluses. Food smoking two packs of cigarettes a day for 35 years.

Tuesday, Jan. 23, 1973

Of just the monetary effect, he said, "I could have been driving Cadillacs all these years instead of second-hand Chevys."

Through the course, we were exposed to doctors in every possible field of medicine in which cigarettes could prove to have a debilitating effect. In each case, the doctors, from heart specialists to dentists to general practitioners, asked for abstinence.

In addition, a technicolor film, oftentimes of operations for cigarette-related illnesses, was shown each night. A notebook filled with colored photographs of diseased tissue filled out the horror-packed part of the course.

I had thought initially that I wouldn't be affected by all the medical testimony. Too often, I'd used the excuse when confronted by the same information: "It hasn't been definitely proven yet."

The Post-Crescent, Appleton-Neshanic-Manitou, Wis. A-6

By the end of the course, when I knew I had to go it alone, cigarette smoking was no longer my major thought each day. It had begun to subside as a craving.

But, in periods of stress, where in the past I had reached for a cigarette, the old feeling would return. That's when the medical knowledge would come in handy. It gave me a definite reason, not just knowing vaguely that it was better for me, to keep my resolve.

It's been over six weeks now and I can pay for the lamp I bought to test myself. I planned to use the $30 for the lamp from money I saved by not smoking.

Am I optimistic about my chances? Last week I committed myself for a trip to Mexico—about a year's worth of not smoking.

And, if my non-smoking savings don't quite meet the cost, some of my smoking friends would probably be more than glad to help out, just to get rid of my speeches!

Gov. Reagan pointing for '76 nomination?

SACRAMENTO, Calif. — Gov. Ronald Reagan plans to announce within the next three months that he will not run for the U.S. Senate or any other office in 1974 — a decision, oddly, that could help propel him into the 1976 presidential sweepstakes.

Completing eight years of controversy as governor, Reagan has also abandoned his old dream of reverting to rancher in the California desert to live out his remaining years on horseback. Instead, he will take to the national banquet circuit, perhaps as head of a conservative citizens group, and preach the gospel of limited government.

The businessmen, politicians and staffers who advise Reagan view this as the best path to the White House. Aware of Vice President Spiro T. Agnew's low estate there, they see Reagan (62 years old on Feb. 6) as the logical heir to the conservative domestic policies of President Nixon's second term.

Won't run for anything in '74
The first step down this long path is the decision not to run for anything in 1974. There is no truth in current rumors at the state capital that Reagan will seek a third-term to avert a bloody Republican primary. There remains an outside chance he might run for the senate, but his key advisers are against it.

For one thing, it's too risky. Private polls show Reagan running behind Democratic Sen. Alan Cranston, up for reelection in 1974. A loss to liberal, colorless Cranston would end Reagan's fabulous political career.

However, Reagan's popularity here seems rising again after its recent decline, and the issues during his last two years as governor seem on his side. He is pushing anti-crime legislation and calling for taxpayer distribution of an $850 million budget surplus. He will be extremely active pushing capital punishment legislation against adamant opposition from the Democratic-controlled legislature, considering overwhelming passage last November of a capital punishment referendum, which has the popular side.

No longer zealous partisan
At the same time, abrasive issues that damaged Reagan's popularity — taxes and higher education — are subsiding. Nor is Reagan today nearly the zealous partisan of his early years as governor. His recent "State of the State" message was conciliatory, and he has developed surprisingly warm relations with Democratic assembly speaker Bob Moretti.

All this means Reagan would be a formidable foe against Cranston. But to what avail? Reagan has no zest for the senate's back row, and his supporters regard it a poor launching pad for 1976.

Instead, after campaigning nationwide for Republican candidates in 1974, private citizen Reagan will go on what he calls "the mashed potato circuit." Plans are barely begun for a foundation to promote Reagan's philosophy ("maybe sort of a conservative Nader's raiders," says one Reagan insider). Like Richard M. Nixon in 1967-68, Reagan would be troubled by neither governmental duties nor embarrassing Senate votes.

Reagan and his inner circle see him not only as the logical heir of Mr. Nixon's conservative domestic policies but the President's tutor. They quite correctly believe Reagan's implacable opposition contributed to Mr. Nixon's desertion of the Family Assistance Plan and less accurately view current Nixon budget-slashing as an imitation of the Reagan California model.

He lectured President
Indeed, the tutorial rule is overt. In his last two private meetings with Mr. Nixon just before and after the election, Reagan — using "reading sheets" prepared by his staff — lectured the President on "impingement" of the federal leviathan on state government.

What makes Reagan's ambitions credible even at his age is the possibility of a vacuum on the Republican right. Texas Democrat John B. Connally's intentions toward Republicanism, though strongly suspected, are not yet proved. Vice President Spiro T. Agnew's performance has not impressed Republican conservatives for some time (particularly in California, where his numerous vacations with Frank

Taxi driver changes mind after one day

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — A Miami cab driver has called it quits after he wound up spending his first night on the job locked in the car's trunk.

Frederick Hodgetts, 53, said he spent more than 12 hours in the trunk after two robbers held him up and pistol-whipped him.

"It was my first night on the job and my last," Hodgetts told Miami Beach police after being freed Wednesday morning.

Hodgetts, who had been seeking work since arriving in Miami from New Castle, Pa., three months ago, started his new job at 4 p.m.

Three hours later two men hailed the cab, held him up for $26 and beat him before ordering him to climb in the trunk, police said.

Hodgetts yelled for a while but then decided it was hopeless. "Finally I figured there would be nobody around until morning and I fell asleep."

In the morning Hodgetts woke up, let out a few more screams and was finally rescued.

East German woman risks death in swim

LUENEBURG, Germany (AP) — A 22-year-old East German woman braved near-freezing temperatures and swam the River Elbe to escape to the West, customs officials reported today.

The woman was found on the West German bank of the river late Sunday night, suffering from exposure and near exhaustion.

Princess Anne spends weekend with Phillips

LONDON (AP) — Princess Anne spent the weekend fox hunting with the man who some gossips report she will marry.

Lt. Mark Phillips, the army officer who is serving with the Queen's Dragoon Guards in Germany, took a weekend furlough to join the 22-year-old princess at the southern England estate of Comte Guy de Plete.

The princess and Phillips rode to the hounds with the Blackmore and Sparksford Vale Hunt in Somerset.

Phillips later caught a car ferry across the English Channel to drive back to his regiment in North Germany.

Speculation that Queen Elizabeth's daughter and Phillips are soon to be engaged reached a climax earlier this month when the two were seen kissing in public before he went off to join his regiment.

Pilot urged to stay off Great Highway

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The police department has told pilots: Please pick another highway for emergency landings.

Police Chief Donald Scott says too many pilots have been using the Great Highway along San Francisco's ocean front as an emergency landing strip.

In letters to the Federal Aviation Administration and military commands in the area, Scott said landing aircraft pose a danger to homes bordering Ocean Beach, less than 100 yards from the highway. Street lights, traffic signals and road signs could damage the planes, causing them to spin out of control, he added.

Scott said police closed the highway last month for a Navy plane reported in trouble. Although it made a safe landing elsewhere, he said a radio announcement lured many spectators to the highway.

Johnson deeply regretted his failure to reach peace

WASHINGTON (AP) — In the beginning of Lyndon B. Johnson's presidency, Vietnam was a shadow on his horizon. At the end, it cast a pall ranging far across his administration.

"The strain of prolonged engagement in a distant war stirred deep controversy among our people," Johnson said later. "The war created or deepened divisions, between the President and Congress, between 'doves' and 'hawks,' between generations..."

So it was in a Vietnam speech, March 31, 1968, announcing a scaleback of the U.S. air assault on North Vietnam in a move to promote peace negotiations, that Johnson dropped his ultimate political bombshell:

"I shall not seek, and I will not accept, the nomination of my party for another term as your president."

Johnson's deep disappointment shows in his memoirs, "The Vantage Point." He wrote:

"I regretted more than anyone could possibly know that I was leaving the White House without having achieved a just, an honorable, and a lasting peace in Vietnam."

At the start, when Johnson stepped into office in November 1963 following John F. Kennedy's assassination, Vietnam admittedly was a difficulty. Kennedy had sent 16,000 U.S. troops there, largely under the label of advisers and technicians. Johnson was to swell the force to some 540,000.

In his first hours in the White House Johnson was briefed on foreign affairs. While South Vietnam "gave me real cause for concern," he recalled, "compared with later periods, even the situation in Vietnam at that point appeared to be relatively free from the pressure of immediate decisions."

His top advisers offered a generally hopeful assessment of prospects for stemming the Communist tide in the faraway Southeast Asian country. At the same time, the new president professed to have some misgivings.

In the presidential election the following year Johnson rated himself as a Vietnam "peace" candidate as against his more militantly anti-Communist Republican opponent, Barry Goldwater. Johnson won the election in a landslide.

Yet various plans already were under way within the administration, as the secret Pentagon papers later showed, for more forceful action in the Indochina conflict.

In August 1964 the Navy reported attacks by North Vietnamese patrol boats on U.S. destroyers in the Gulf of Tonkin. The affair spurred sponsorship by the administration of a congressional resolution that was to be a center of controversy in ensuing years during Johnson's Vietnam buildup.

The Tonkin Gulf resolution was passed by Senate and House by lopsided majorities. In it, Congress gave its support to the President for "all necessary measures to repel any armed attack against the forces of the United States and to prevent further aggression."

The resolution declared also that the United States was prepared "to take all necessary steps, including the use of armed force, to help any Indochina ally."

Johnson maintained the Tonkin Gulf measure gave congressional support to the deeper U.S. involvement in Vietnam. Critics vigorously disputed this.

In February 1965 Johnson began the U.S. air assaults on North Vietnam. He followed up that spring with the introduction of U.S. combat troops whose number eventually swelled to more than half a million.

Meanwhile, he was accompanying the military stepup with a continuing series of unsuccessful peace moves.

In April 1965 he delivered a major address at Johns Hopkins University urging Hanoi to join in trying to reach a settlement. In October 1966 he journeyed to Manila to join with Vietnam allies in proposing a peace solution.

He sent diplomats around the world on secret and public peace-seeking missions, sometimes accompanied by pauses in the U.S. bombing of the North.

Finally, in November 1968, Johnson was able to reach a bomb-halt-negotiations deal with North Vietnam which led to the Paris peace parley. The negotiating sessions at the French capital got under way just after Johnson left office and have continued intermittently since.

In one of history's coincidences, Johnson's death came shortly before an expected initialing of a Vietnam peace pact under the administration of his successor, President Nixon.

Johnson felt that he had left a springboard for Nixon to use toward peace in Vietnam when the new President entered office in January 1969.

"I felt I was turning over to President Nixon," he said, "a foreign-policy problem that, although serious, was improving; an ally that was stronger than ever before; an enemy weakened and beaten in every major engagement; and a working forum for peace."

Civil rights record an impressive history

WASHINGTON (AP) — "We Shall Overcome." The words of the civil-rights anthem rolled out across the nation in the distinct tones of the South. Lyndon Johnson of Texas was telling America to live up to its promise of equality.

The commitment to civil rights for blacks came late to Johnson—he had once voted against an antilynching law. But, when it came, it came with all the strength, cleverness and stubbornness that was in him, and there was plenty of all three.

And it stayed. When he stood before Congress and in front of television cameras in 1965 to say "we shall overcome," he was not spouting rhetoric convenient for a Democratic party leader.

In one of his last public acts, former President Lyndon Johnson stood on the steps of the library he had built as a monument to himself in Austin, Tex., to say America still owed its blacks what they deserved as a birthright—equality.

"To be black is not to stand on level ground," he said last Dec. 12, nearly four years past the time he needed to be concerned about acceptance.

But he was concerned; enough to spend an exhausting day trying to retie the strands of a tattered civil-rights coalition that had come apart from age and innerdoubt.

It was this concern, and the record he built as 36th president, that was in the memories of many who mourned after hearing of Johnson's death Monday night.

The Rev. David Abernathy, president of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference and Organizer of the Poor People's March in Washington during Johnson's administration, said "the nation, the world, black people and poor people in particular lost one of the greatest friends of democracy."

But Abernathy went on, "I think his greatest contribution rests in the fact that he could lift himself beyond the barrier of sectionalism, refusing to be a Southerner clinging to a dead and unjust society."

Thurgood Marshall could speak as one who knew firsthand of Johnson's commitment to blacks. Johnson named him the first black to serve as a justice on the Supreme Court, Marshall said.

"In his private and official acts, President Johnson will go down in history as the one president who did all in his power to promote humanitarianism—the equalitarian principle of the equality of man."

Johnson's desire to move into the vanguard for racial equality first was evident in 1957 when, as Senate Democratic leader, he turned his back on his colleagues from the South and engineered passage of the nation's first civil-rights laws since Reconstruction.

Johnson took another step, and pushed the country with him, in 1964 when, as President, he convinced Congress to go along with another, much stronger civil-rights bill.

"We have talked long enough about equal rights in this country," he called out. "We have talked for 100 years or more. It is time to write the next chapter and to write it in the books of law."

Johnson got his bill, but he got it partly because he cloaked its passage in the memory of the murdered John F. Kennedy.

In 1965 another, even stronger, bill to protect and further the rights of blacks and other minorities came to Congress, and Johnson used all his magical charm, and the credits owed him from more than a quarter century in Congress, to get passage. And the victory was his, without qualification.

It was then, 1965, that Johnson stood on the mountain, hailed as the rightful successor to the man who had taken blacks out of bondage a century before—Abraham Lincoln.

But the fate that was spared Lincoln by an assassin's bullet hit Johnson full in the face—disillusionment by blacks who felt rightfully or not that the share of the Great Society delivered them was really short change.

First came Watts, then Detroit and Bedford-Stuyvesant and Newark—blacks in a rage against whites and that included the white resident of the big white house at 1600 Pennsylvania Ave. in Washington, D.C.

Johnson ordered a federal investigation of the riots, but when the reports came in blaming the national government for not doing enough he reacted defensively.

Then, on April 4, 1968, Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. was assassinated and the nation's capital city erupted in riot, with whole blocks turned into infernos only 10 blocks from the White House.

Here, with machine-gunned soldiers guarding the executive mansion and as smoke drifted over the city, Johnson rededicated himself to his commitment.

Speaking over national television and radio, he said: "The dream of Martin Luther King has not died with him."

"Men who are white, men who are black, must and will join together now as never in the past to let all the forces of division know that America shall not be ruled by the bullet but by the ballot of free and just men."

By now, Johnson was already a lame duck, hounded by the dissent and frustration of a failing Vietnam policy into renouncing any attempt at reelection.

And with his hopes for another term in the White House went his dreams of entering history as the man who delivered to all Americans the promise of the Declaration of Independence, dreams he expressed in the same 1965 speech in which he pledged "we shall overcome."

"I want," he said that day, "to be the president who helped to end hatred among his fellow men and who promoted love among the people of all races."

October 1966 — Made a 17-day, seven-nation swing through Asia.

aboard Air Force One.

Mrs. Johnson leaned toward him and said gently, "Dear, it proves that you can leave town."

The President said nothing in response. But within the month he abdicated, in effect, saying he hoped it would lead to peace in Vietnam.

A friend in Maryland, Spiro Agnew, was startled and rather saddened. Before long, he journeyed to the White House to talk in private with the retiring President who shared with him a streak of political populism.

The Johnson-Agnew friendship was known to relatively few at the time. It was founded on Agnew's stout defense of LBJ's Vietnam policies.

If the Indochina war blighted Johnson's final months in office, he carried with him always great pride in his espousal of causes aimed at bettering the lot of blacks and poor people.

The depth of his commitment seemed evident in a 1964 campaign speech delivered before the first integrated audience at one New Orleans hotel and broadcast live on television throughout Louisiana and Mississippi.

Johnson recalled that the late Sam Rayburn, soon after election to the House, sought advice from an aging senator from Mississippi.

The old senator told young Sam he was going home before he died to give his constituents one last "good Democratic speech."

Johnson went on quoting the senator: "They haven't heard a good Democratic speech since Reconstruction. Every year at election time, all they ever hear is 'nigger, nigger, nigger.'"

Lyndon Johnson lost Louisiana and Mississippi.

Nov. 16, 1966 — Underwent surgery at the Bethesda Naval Hospital for incisional hernia removal of polyp from throat.

June 23, 1967 — Summit meeting with Soviet Premier Alexei N. Kosygin at Glassboro, N.J. Second meeting June 25.

Mid-1967 — Despite dissent in Congress and on the street, war continued to escalate; 453,000 Americans in South Vietnam.

Dec. 9, 1967 — Daughter Lynda married Marine Capt. Charles Robb in first White House marriage of a President's daughter in 53 years.

March 31, 1968 — Announced in nationwide television speech that electrified the nation that "I shall not seek and I will not accept the nomination of my party as your President," withdrawing in the name of national unity. Also announced restriction of bombing in Vietnam to below 19th parallel and called for peace talks.

April 3, 1968 — North Vietnam accepted U.S. bid to talks. May 10 meeting in Paris set.

Jan. 20, 1969 — Handed over presidency to Richard M. Nixon and retired to LBJ ranch in Texas.

Senate career brought fame as tactician

WASHINGTON (AP) — Lyndon Johnson served in Congress 24 years but it was his final eight years, as Senate Democratic Leader, that brought him acclaim as one of the master legislative tacticians of American history.

Johnson was elected to the House in 1937 and served six terms. But seniority is slow in the House and the lanky Texan had not made a strong impression when he moved to the Senate on his second try in 1949.

There his rise was meteoric. After two years, he was elected Democratic whip, the No. 2 leadership post. Two years later he was chosen Democratic Leader and held that job until he ran as John F. Kennedy's vice president.

The influence of Georgia Sen. Richard B. Russell, leader of the Southern bloc and a powerful behind-the-scenes figure, was credited by some with helping Johnson win the Senate post.

But other Democratic senators gave the credit to Johnson himself. They said he was soliciting them by phone for their votes within an hour after it became known the 1951-52 leader, Sen. Ernest McFarland, had been defeated in Arizona by Republican Barry Goldwater.

Once he became leader, other senators marveled at his 18-hour days and his legislative acumen.

For hours he would sit sprawled at his front-row desk, waiting for just the moment when a compromise amendment or a sudden rallying of senators would bring the advantage he wanted.

Then he would leap into action. Brushing aside the Senate page, Johnson himself would carry an amendment to the Senate clerks. He had a set of hand signals which he used to tell the clerks when he wanted a roll-call expedited up.

One of his favorite methods was to hold the Senate in night sessions to speed up work on a bill. Most of the major measures he pushed through were passed near midnight.

After one of his legislative triumphs, Johnson often called reporters to his Senate office for a drink at which times he explained the strategy he used to get the winning votes.

Then as he left the Capitol at one or two in the morning, he could be seen in the Senate limousine talking on the telephone to other senators laying the groundwork for the next day.

Johnson said one of his proudest victories was in 1956 when he overcame President Eisenhower's forces by a two-vote margin to write coverage of disabled persons into the Social Security system.

This coverage had been one of President Franklin D. Roosevelt's goals when Social Security was set up in 1935, but he was denied it by Congress.

One of Johnson's most startling triumphs came in 1959 in the 49-46 rejection of Eisenhower's nomination of Lewis L. Strauss to be secretary of commerce. Johnson always claimed that he started that fight with less than 30 votes opposed to Strauss.

'Great Society' giving way to Nixon's 'New Federalism'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Many of Lyndon B. Johnson's Great Society social programs are being dismantled at the time of his death, victims of a budget squeeze and his successor's different approach to domestic problems.

Model Cities, urban renewal, housing subsidies and manpower training are among the Johnson-era programs falling before President Nixon's budget ax.

But other major legislative accomplishments of Johnson's term—especially Medicare and antidiscrimination laws—will long endure.

Three factors have prompted Nixon's moves to phase out or sharply curtail Great Society social-spending programs.

First is their steadily rising costs. Nixon wants to hold federal spending this fiscal year to $250 billion, and next fiscal year to about $270 billion. To do this mandates sharp cuts in big-ticket programs.

Second is the fact that Nixon and many of his key advisers hold that many Great Society programs are, as White House aide John Ehrlichman put it, "inherently unworkable."

Third is Nixon's view that revenue sharing is a better way to attack major social ills. By funneling money to the local and state level with few strings attached instead of closely supervised grants—Nixon calls it New Federalism—he and his aides contend more can be accomplished at lower cost.

In the past month, a number of Great Society programs have been hit by a series of cutbacks, freezes and fund impoundments.

For example, an 18-month moratorium has been placed on all new commitments for federal-housing-subsidy programs for low- and middle-income families, a federal-aid system established by legislation Johnson initiated.

Likewise, a freeze has been imposed on new financing for Model Cities and urban renewal, as well as for manpower training programs.

In addition to the temporary measures applying to current fiscal-year spending, administration sources are predicting cuts of up to 50 per cent in programs of the Department of Housing and Urban Development—another Johnson legacy when Nixon sends his fiscal 1974 budget to Congress next week.

tailored operations of the poverty-fighting Office of Economic Opportunity. Some major OEO programs, such as Head Start, have been shifted to other agencies or eliminated completely.

Of all the social programs Johnson pushed through Congress, perhaps the most enduring has been Medicare, the system of medical care for the aged financed through Social Security.

Medicare was first proposed by President John F. Kennedy, but Kennedy couldn't get it through Congress Johnson did.

son's invitation to a deerhunting trip in Texas even though "I didn't care about hunting deer myself—I don't like to shoot animals."

On that trip, LBJ was showing off his new guest house and bragging that it was built for $10,000. The Humphreys were so impressed, they borrowed the floor plans to build their own home like it in Minnesota.

By the time the Humphreys made adjustments for the cold Minnesota winters and added a few other extras, "that $10,000 house cost $50,000."

Romping with Lyn

Down on his hands and knees, President Johnson played on the lawn with his first grandchild, Patrick Lyndon Nugent when the boy was 10 months old in 1968. Lyn is the son of younger daughter Luci Nugent.

Doctors who treated him produced surprises

WASHINGTON (AP) — Lyndon Johnson's doctors pulled a couple of surprises during the Texan's rather eventful and varied medical history.

In January 1965, Johnson developed a pesky cold with an accompanying cough that became known as "the cough heard 'round the world" because of the wide publicity given it.

Thanks to it, an old-fashioned cough syrup—known as "brown mixture"—popped into the headlines.

The syrup, also known as "licorice extract," first came on the market in 1836 and reportedly was extremely popular in a Civil War days.

Many modern-day folks hadn't heard of it until Rear Adm. George Burkley, the President's physician, announced he had prescribed it for the presidential cough. Burkley, incorrectly called "Brown's mixture," but reporters research showed there was no Dr. Brown. The medicine got its name from its color.

In October of that same year, Johnson's doctors pulled another surprise.

It was announced that Johnson was going to have an operation for the removal of a stone from his gall bladder. But the next morning, when Press Secretary Bill Moyers announced the operation had been "completely successful," he disclosed that the surgeons had also removed a kidney stone.

Johnson's doctors had said nothing about the kidney stone prior to the operation.

The former president's other illnesses and operations included

His first heart attack in 1955, a big one, a kidney infection in 1963, wart-like growths on his hand in 1965, a hernia operation in 1966, coupled with the removal of a benign growth from a vocal cord, a 1968 bout with diverticulitis, a painful intestinal ailment, a cardiac-related episode of chest pains in 1970, though short of an actual heart attack, a bout with viral pneumonia in 1971, his second major heart attack in April, 1972, and another episode of chest pains last July.

Flags fly half-staff for two

WASHINGTON (AP) — Lyndon B. Johnson's death leaves the nation without a living ex-president for the first time in 40 years. For only the second time, flags are being flown at half-staff for two former chief executives.

Johnson's death Monday night came within a month of former President Harry S. Truman's demise Dec. 26. The only other time when flags were flown at half-staff for two ex-presidents was when Thomas Jefferson and John Adams died on the same day—July 4, 1826.

Johnson's death marks the fifth time in history the United States is without a living former president.

Theodore Roosevelt served the last months of his presidency with no living ex-president after Grover Cleveland died June 24, 1908.

George Washington's death Dec. 14, 1799, left his former vice president, John Adams, without a living predecessor. And Ulysses S. Grant finished his second term without a living ex-president following Andrew Johnson's death July 31, 1875.

'Every age good age when you reach it'

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — In a letter dated last Friday, former President Lyndon B. Johnson told a 15-year-old Providence girl that "every age turns out to be a good age when you reach it."

The letter was delivered to the home of Heidi L. Brown on Monday morning, the day of Johnson's death.

He was responding to a letter Heidi had written him in which she thanked him for remembering the birthday of her uncle, Russell.

Russell Brown, a Washington attorney, had shared a $20-a-month room with Johnson when the two were law students in Washington in the 1930s.

Johnson, who usually sent cards to Brown on his birthday, mailed a letter instead to mark Brown's 60th anniversary. Brown sent the letter to Heidi, and she wrote the President in thanks.

The letter to Heidi, with a return address of "Lyndon B. Johnson, Austin, Texas, 78701," said:

"Dear Heidi: "First let me tell you that every age turns out to be a good age when you reach it, and it is comforting to old folks like your uncle Russ and me to know this."

"But, if I were you, I would not even think now about the possibility that life may begin at 20 or 30 or that it still can be a great life even at 60."

"As you say, you have much to do and you want to get on with it. The sooner you commence, the better equipped you will be to find all the later ages as enriching as the young ones."

"Yes, it is really true that our rent was $20 a month. Our salary was such that we could not afford to have dinner very often at the Dodge Hotel dining room because the least expensive dinner was $1."

"However, we did not feel too hampered by lack of money. Life was an exciting challenge as we dreamed and talked, and bragged a little, and prepared ourselves to meet the future."

Humphrey recalls LBJ years

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation and its president were weary on that day in 1968 when Hubert H. Humphrey listened as Lyndon B. Johnson told of his decision not to run for reelection.

Though a desire to end the Vietnam war was his prime motive, Johnson also dreaded the prospect of another campaign.

"He said the campaign is terribly hard. He had had a heart attack. And he said, 'the men in my family do not live long,'" Humphrey recalled hours after Johnson died Monday night.

His death stirred somber reminiscences from Humphrey, who prospered under Johnson's tutelage in the Senate and served in the Texan's shadow as vice president.

"The thing that always impressed me about Sen. Johnson was you couldn't put him in a pocket. He refused to be put in a political stereotype. That stood him well over the years," Humphrey said.

Humphrey, like many who surrounded Johnson, felt the bite of his temper and the strength of his will. Humphrey recalled accepting John-
